ASSURING BRITISH SECURITY

BRITISH INTERESTS IN CHINA

NOT AFFECTED BY AUTONOMY MOVE

SHANGHAI SITUATION

London, Feb. 4.

Replying to questions in the House of Commons to-day regarding the situation in China, Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, briefly recalled the establishment of the Hopei-Charhar Political Council and the administration of the demilitarised zone in north-east Hopei by the autonomous Council.

The Minister added that so far as he was aware British interests in North China had not been materially affected.

Meanwhile, he said, it had been reported that the Japanese Government had accepted the Chinese Government's invitation to discuss outstanding points of political and economic difference. There was good reason to hope an effort would be made to regularise the position through diplomatic channels.

SHANGHAI SITUATION

Mr. A. E. L. Charlton, (U), asked whether there had been any report on the relations existing between the Shanghai Japanese and the Shanghai Municipal Council.

Mr. Eden informed the House that several reports had been received on current events, showing there was a demand in certain Japanese quarters in Shanghai for increased representation on the Municipal Council.

Official relations appeared quite normal, he added.—Reuter.

KING'S FIRST OBJECT

GUARDING LIBERTY OF HIS PEOPLES

MESSAGE TO PARLIAMENT

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, Feb. 4.

It was officially revealed to-day that when King Edward received a deputation of members of the House of Commons at Buckingham Palace on January 27, bringing an address of condolence, His Majesty, after the presentation, made a formal reply, in the course of which he said:

"May I say that the formality of this occasion is somewhat lessened by the presence of so many familiar faces? You have all served my father in different Governments during his great reign. The sight of old friends bringing me this address gives me encouragement and confidence for the future."—Reuter Special.

KING'S FIRST OBJECT

London, Feb. 4.

When the House of Commons convened to-day, His Majesty the King sent a message, in which he stated:— "I have received with true satisfaction the loyal and affectionate address from the House of Commons concerning the grievous loss which I have sustained and concerning my succession to the Throne.

"I thank you for your expression of loyal attachment to my person. You may be assured that the first object of my life will be to maintain the liberties of my peoples and to promote the welfare of all classes. I pray that by the blessing of Almighty God I may justify your trust through-out my reign."—United Press.

DEFENCE BUDGET AWAITED

SUPPORT PROMISED AGAINST ATTACK

REVELATIONS IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

(By Telegraph. Copyright Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1891. Received, Feb. 5, 8 a.m.)

London, Feb. 4.

Proposals for the reorganisation of Great Britain's armed forces would soon be made public, Mr. Stanley Baldwin announced to-day in the House of Commons. The plans of the Government entailed considerable expansion of the country's defence units, he declared, but the full details would shortly be disclosed in a White Paper.

After that the House would discuss the scheme, but he would not announce any date for the debate.

Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Minister, whose energy recently has been concentrated on the subject of the proposed oil embargo against Italy and the dangers involved in such a contingency, informed the House that experts were still studying the possibility of this form of sanctions.

He briefly mentioned the exchange of views between Great Britain, France, Greece, Turkey, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Albania and Spain, regarding mutual military support in the event of an attack.

These discussions "revealed a complete identity of views," the Foreign Minister disclosed.—United Press.

EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT

London, Feb. 4.

The Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, announced in the Commons at question-time that the Government's proposals regarding defence requirements would be made available at an early date in a White Paper, giving full details, which would be issued sufficiently in advance of the general discussion in the House.

Replying to Sir Austen Chamberlain, he said he did not think the debate would take place in the immediate future.—British Wireless.

LONDON PARLEYS

London, Feb. 4.

In the House of Commons to-day, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Admiralty briefly reviewed the work of the Naval Conference still in session here.

He said the conference was now beginning a long discussion on qualitative limitation of fleet strength and the Government wanted an agreement at the Conference before deciding whether other countries would be invited to participate, as Mr. A. V. Alexander, the former Labour Government's First Lord of the Admiralty, had suggested.

Mr. C. R. Attlee, leader of the Opposition, inquired when the House would be informed regarding the Government's proposals for increased expenditure on armaments.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, replied that a white paper would be issued with respect to armament expenditures, to be followed by a full discussion. But he thought the debate would not be immediate.—Reuter.

EIGHT DIE OF COLD AS EASTERN U.S. FREEZES

New York, Feb. 4.

There have been many accidents in the eastern United States as a result of severe frosts following a drizzle of rain. Streets in scores of cities were ice-coated and were rendered not only unsafe for pedestrians and motor vehicles, but almost impassable.

Traffic has been held up generally. Farmers were obliged to deliver their milk and dairy produce by sledge in many places.

Meanwhile, there is still heavy snow in places. Six trains are stuck deep in snow-drifts in Iowa. In Illinois, the terrible cold snap continues. There have been eight

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Prime Minister, who has announced that a White Paper will shortly be issued setting forth Britain's defence requirements in detail.

COMING WEDDINGS

COLUMN CUT TO PIECES?

ETHIOPIAN CLAIMS

Addis Ababa, Feb. 4.

The Italian column which attacked the troops of Dajaz Hayaunu Merde on the southern front have been repulsed by the Ethiopians with heavy losses inflicted, according to a still unconfirmed report.

The Italians left 1,700 dead on the field, most of them men of the Black-shirt battalions.—Reuter.

MEETING CRISIS

Rome, Feb. 4.

For the first time since its enlargement in November last to include representatives of nearly every branch of national activity, the Supreme Council of National Defence met this afternoon.

The Fascist Dictator, Signor Benito Mussolini, is the President of the body, and its proceedings are guarded closely and kept most secret. The meetings of the Council are likely to continue for several days.

No communiques will be issued with respect to proceedings but it is supposed that the defensive organisation of the nation, against the extension of sanctions, and against any conflict that may ensue, is being discussed from both civil and military sides.—Reuter Special.

FUEL CONTROL

Rome, Feb. 4.

A Royal Decree was issued to-day for the formation of a Technical Co-operative Committee to deal with the control of liquid fuels in Italy and to ascertain the necessary requirements of the country.

The Committee will also study the production of substitutes in the place of liquid fuel and oils.

The Decree calls for the formation of a Committee to deal with the production of vegetables, fruits, glass pottery and hemp, in addition.—Reuter.

FIRST COMMUNIQUE

Rome, Feb. 4.

A communique was issued at the conclusion of the Fascist Grand Council meeting at 12.30 a.m. to-day, following a three hour session, declares that the Council regards the recent military victories on the Eritrean and Somali fronts as determining factors in the Ethiopian situation.

The Council reaffirms its decision to reach the objective for which the military effort was initiated.

The Council also drew up a plan for Italy's counter-measures in the event of a stiffening of sanctions by the League of Nations. It adopted a motion for the direct control of foreign trade by the Finance Minister.—Reuter.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS QUERIES

EDEN COVERS WIDE AREA IN REPLY

LEAGUE AND SANCTIONS

London, Feb. 4.

Among a number of important questions answered at the first meeting of the House of Commons for business since the adjournment before Christmas were several relating to foreign affairs.

Replies were given by Mr. Anthony Eden, who, rising to answer for the first time as Foreign Secretary, was loudly cheered. Mr. Eden announced the issue of two White Papers containing a collection of documents descriptive of the League's work on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute and correspondence in connection with the application of Article 16 of the League Covenant.

The publication of these papers enabled the Foreign Secretary to confine his replies to half a dozen questions on the Italo-Ethiopian dispute to a description of the latest developments. He recalled that when League's Committee of Thirteen met at Senator William E. Borah, who has definitely announced his candidacy for the United States Presidency.

Borah's Hat In Ring

CANDIDATE FOR U.S. PRESIDENCY

Washington, Feb. 4.

Senator William Borah, the Western political "strong man" of the Republican Party, has announced that he will definitely stand in the forthcoming presidential election.

Senator Borah, whose home state is Idaho, and whose political headquarters is ordinarily at Boise, is one of the most influential men in the Republican Party and carries a tremendous following throughout the West and Middle West. It is even expected that his candidature may compel a strong following from the ordinarily solid "Democrats" of the southern states.

He has this advantage over any Democrat candidate, that there is no other outstanding Republican likely to enter the field, and there is therefore little likelihood of the party vote being split.—Reuter.

Cutting Down U.S. Loans

ROOSEVELT TAKEN WITH ECONOMY

Washington, Feb. 4.

President Roosevelt, at a press conference, said he was preparing to reduce the lending authorisation of various Government agencies, such as the R.F.C., the H.O.L.C., and the F.C.A., by over a billion dollars.

The President explained that a survey showed that the original authorisation was no longer needed. He emphasised that the savings incurred would not be available to meet other Government expenses.

President Roosevelt pledged the orderly marketing of cotton holdings, but stressed that the reduction of lending authorisation would not affect the Cotton Loan. He added that the speed of cotton liquidation will determine the need for the $100,000,000 still available for such loans.—Reuter Special.

NEW ANGLO-EGYPTIAN TREATY PLANNED

London, Feb. 4.

In the House of Commons, the Foreign Secretary, questioned with regard to Egypt, replied that in response to the request of the United Front for the negotiation of a Treaty of Alliance, the High Commissioner had been instructed to state that His Majesty's Government were prepared to enter forthwith into conversations with the Egyptian Government with the object of arriving at an Anglo-Egyptian treaty settlement.

With a view to promoting the prospects of a comprehensive settlement, His Majesty's Government thought it desirable to begin with the categories which had given most difficulties—were surmounted, the prospects of reaching a settlement would clearly be favourable. Sir Miles Lampson had duly informed King Fuad, the Egyptian Prime Minister and members of the United Front of this reply. A non-party Government, under the leadership of Ali Maher Pasha, had now been formed, and it was understood that a representative committee of all parties, presided over by Nuh Pasha, would be appointed by Royal Decree to conduct the conversations.—British Wireless.

NAZIS' AGENT SLAIN

SHOT TO DEATH BY JUGO-SLAV

MURDERER'S SURRENDER

Davos, Feb. 4.

A twenty-six year-old Jugo-Slav subject, of Jewish blood, a medical student named David Frankfurter, to-day shot to death the chief Nazi agent in Switzerland.

Frankfurter called on the house of the agent, a man named Gustloff, and as soon as the victim came to the door the young assassin fired five times from close range. Gustloff was killed instantaneously.

Frankfurter left the house at once and surrendered to the police quietly. He said he was not a Communist. He had shot Gustloff deliberately, however, because he hated the German regime.—Reuter.

Defence Of India

CONSULTATION IN EMERGENCY

New Delhi, Feb. 4.

In face of opposition, the Legislative Assembly carried a resolution to establish a standing committee of both Houses for the consideration of all matters concerning defence.

Mr. G. R. F. Tottenham, Secretary of the Army Department, contended that consultation was impracticable in an emergency, especially when secrecy was necessary concerning the despatch of troops.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

SITUATION SATISFACTORY

London, Feb. 4.

The Under Secretary for India, Mr. R. A. Butler, made a statement in the Commons at question-time on the present position in India. The internal situation, he said, remained satisfactory, though vigilance on the part of the police had been strictly maintained with good results.—British Wireless.

SILVER FUTURE TRADING

TO BE RESUMED IN LONDON TO-DAY

New York, Feb. 4.

Messrs. Handy and Harmon's silver quotation remained unchanged at 44 1/2 cents per ounce here to-day. London "spot" silver declined 1/16 pence to 19 1/2 pence per ounce.

London bullion brokers have announced that they will resume dealings in forward silver on Wednesday, January 5. This is interpreted as a definite indication that the spot market is stabilised due to the fact that on December 9, 1935, brokers announced that forward trading would be suspended until the spot position had been cleared up.—United Press.

GREATER POWER NAVAL

BILLS TO IMPROVE U.S. FLEET

CONFERENCE REVIEW

Washington, Feb. 4.

Senator Park Trammell, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, to-day introduced four bills, designed generally to strengthen the Navy.

The first of these measures authorises the expenditure of $6,000,000 to correct the deficiencies in fourteen battleships. The second authorises the modernisation of eight other warships. The third empowers the President of the United States to undertake construction of 221,000 tons of auxiliary ships needed for the proper maintenance and operation of a Treaty-strength Navy.

The fourth bill directs the President to dispose of vessels on their reaching the replacement stage, in accordance with the Washington and London Treaties.

The bills have been referred to the Naval Affairs Committee.—Reuter.

REDUCING COTTON SPINDLES

RUNCIMAN REVEALS STATE OF AFFAIRS

LOSS OF TRADE SINCE 1912

London, Feb. 4.

Moving the second reading of the Cotton Spindles Bill, which aims at a considerable reduction in redundant spindles in Great Britain, the cost of which will be paid out of a levy on the remaining spindles, Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, spoke briefly to-day in the House of Commons.

He explained that the output of the industry was now 61,000, compared with an index figure of 100 in 1912, while the export of piece goods showed an even more alarming drop, the index figure being 29.00 as against 100 in 1912.

Spindles were now 77 per cent. of the 1912 total.

The Government was prepared to reconsider Clause 15 of the Bill which forbids the installation of new spinning machinery in the first three years after the Bill has been passed and also prevents a newcomer entering the industry.

Half the spindles to be wiped out, said Mr. Runciman, were in idle mills or in plants which were not working full time.

According to the poll of the industry, representatives of 28,000,000 spindles favoured the Government's proposals and 11,000,000 disapproved.

LABOUR OPPOSED

Mr. J. R. Clynes, Labour, President of the National Union of General and Municipal Workers, on behalf of the Opposition, opposed the Bill on the ground that it was insufficiently comprehensive.

A Labour amendment for the re-jection of the Bill was defeated 227 to 149, and the Bill passed second reading.—Reuter.

TRIAL BY PEERS

USEFULNESS NOW OUTLIVED

London, Feb. 4.

A motion proposed by Lord Sankey expressing the opinion that the present system of trial by peers had outlived its usefulness was adopted by the House of Lords by 45 votes to 24.

During the debate, opponents of the motion demanded the retention of the old tradition, while supporters contended that the procedure was outmoded by the number of members who refrained from voting.

Lord Sankey foreshadowed the early drafting of a Bill abolishing the procedure.—Reuter Special.

ABOUT H. K.

BRITISH PLANS TO BE CHALLENGED

It is becoming increasingly clear that Great Britain is not to be allowed to establish a commanding position on the Atlantic airways without a struggle.

Other nations are beginning to realize that the North Atlantic line is likely to prove the most remunerative of all the world's air lines, and they are making preparations so that they shall be in a position to compete with Britain.

An agreement has been reached between representatives of Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways for co-operation in the running of an Atlantic air line by way of the Azores and Bermuda; but there is a body of opinion in America that believes that America should free herself from all commitments and run her own air lines independently.

The recent success of the new Pan-American flying boat, the China Clipper, on the Pacific crossing has encouraged this opinion, and it is held that the American lines should retain complete freedom of action, so as to be able eventually to establish all-American air lines going right round the world.

Fresh Pioneer

Air France is also interested in the Atlantic route. This company pioneered the Southern Atlantic air route, and its mail carriers have flown across the ocean 55 times. The service is weekly in both directions. One of the Air France seaplanes has done 23 crossings.

It now appears that Air France is also interested in the North Atlantic route, and that it may use the Lieutenant de Vaisseau Paris, the 37-ton flying boat, for experimental flights during 1936.

Fokker is also known to be considering the construction of Transatlantic flying boats, and Germany hopes to establish more frequent services with airships.

Britain's second string on the Atlantic route, should any hitch occur in the line planned with the co-operation of Pan-American Airways, is provided by the Mayo composite aircraft. This might make possible the establishment of regular mail, and eventually passenger services across the direct route between Ireland and Newfoundland.

Strong westerly winds prevail upon this route, and increase the air mileage by about 30 per cent. But the composite aircraft, if it performs according to the design calculations, should have an ample range margin to meet these conditions.

The extreme northern route by Greenland, although it was used by Balbo, when he led the large formations of Italian seaplanes across, is not regarded with favour for the running of an air line owing to the difficult weather conditions.

They Interrupted Hitler Broadcast

Berlin, Jan. 15. Charged with cutting a cable and thus interrupting a broadcast speech by Hitler, six Communists have been arrested by the Wurttemberg police.

The incident occurred when Hitler was speaking in the Stuttgart Town Hall.

The originator of the plan is stated to have been 23-year-old Kurt Hager, the youngest of the arrested men.

Doris Duke Cromwell, "richest girl in the world," and her socially prominent husband, Jimmy Cromwell, photographed on their arrival in Los Angeles en route home after a honeymoon tour that took them to the far parts of the world. They considered Hongkong one of the prettiest places they had visited.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPH EVER TAKEN

PRECIOUS RELIC SLOWLY FADING

A PHOTOGRAPH so precious that it has been on view for only two minutes during the past year was shown for a dozen seconds during the first of the annual Christmas lectures for children at the Royal Institution recently.

It is the earliest existing photograph on paper, and it was taken in August, 1835, by Fox Talbot, of Lacock Abbey, Wilts. Only two inches square, it represents one of the Abbey windows, and every pane is perfectly distinct.

But it is slowly fading away, and unless the utmost precautions are taken the picture will soon disappear entirely.

Research Wizard

The Christmas lectures this year are on photography, and are being given by the "Kodak Wizard," Dr. C. E. K. Mees, director of research of Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, U.S.A.

Dr. Mees probably knows more about the photographic process than any living man.

He showed the children another rare photograph—the first American daguerrotype, for which a Miss Dorothy Draper sat for five minutes in blazing sunshine with her head in a tight wooden clamp and her face completely white-washed.

"They were victims, not subjects, in those days," said Dr. Mees.

Picture Of Audience

Dr. Mees is a British subject, though he has directed work for the Eastman Company since 1912. He was born in Wellingborough 53 years ago, and his wife is a Purley woman.

In 1906 he made the first pan-chromatic plates. At present he is perfecting amateur colour films for 16mm. motion picture work.

KING EDWARD CUTS DOWN ON "FAGS"

London, Jan. 26.
The new King of England on the side of forty where life is supposed to be just beginning, is cutting down on cigarettes.

Just as he started reducing his daily wine consumption a few years ago King Edward is smoking cigarettes that are similar in looks to the American "cubs" although they haven't undergone any de-nicotinizing process.

His cigarettes, made exclusively for him but without any cross or other marks of royal distinction which might make them prize trophies for the hero-worshippers, contain only half the usual amount of tobacco. The rest of the cylinder is a cardboard tube.

The new type of cigarettes is actually a compromise on the part of the King with his will-power, some of his friends say. For two or three years he has wanted to reduce his cigarette consumption—not because it appeared to be injuring his health but because he thought it would be rather a "good idea."

Plays Patience

Often in the privacy of his study when he felt the urge for a cigarette he would steel himself against it, obtain a pack of playing cards and deal a game of "patience" which is similar to the American game called "solitaire."

But that was too much trouble so he decided on the half-filled cigarettes. Now he smokes just as many cigarettes but less tobacco.

Cigarette smoking in England is almost twice as expensive as the habit is in the United States and one frequently hears men and women resolving to swear off entirely or budget themselves, package of standard brand cigarettes here costs 25 shillings—25 cents—as compared with 16 cents in the United States.

Pipe Smokers

Pipe-smoking remains a national institution of Great Britain with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin the most famous pipe-smoker of all.

He rarely is photographed without his pipe as he enters or leaves No. 10 Downing Street and his briar—although not under-slung as characteristic on this side of the Atlantic as that of General Charles G. Dawes or the thin black cigar of the late "Uncle Joe" Cannon.

A smouldering cigarette is as much a part of the personality of Premier Laval of France as his white necktie.

Hitler doesn't smoke, nor does Gandhi, the little brown man of India. But Mussolini does, although—like Calvin Coolidge, the photographers never catch him at it.

Cigar Smokers

Lord Londale is regarded as the best-known cigar-smoker in Great Britain (medium grade cigars cost nearly 25 cents here) and it often has been reported that he smokes only an inch or so of his customary seven-inch Havanna and then lights a fresh one. His friends insist, however, that he is just as liable to make his cigar down a short butt.

Some inveterate cigar-smokers are very fussy. They are careful to pinch the end of a new cigar delicately to break the leaf, expelling the tendency that to cut or pierce the end is a barbarism. But not Lord Londale. He hews a big wedge out of the cigar and with a formidable pocket knife which he carries on the end of a silver vest chain.

There are supposed to be few men who can be either smokers or non-smokers at will but Sir Malcolm Campbell, the speed driver, is one of them. Another is C. B. Cochran, producer of England's biggest musical shows.

3,000,000 BOTTLES OF WINE LEAVING ADELPHI ARCHES

Three million bottles of wine—half the entire stock housed in the Adelphi Arches—are being moved.

After March 25 housebreakers will start destroying Adelphi-terrace to make way for flats. The work of demolition and construction will take three years.

Two new streets will be built, one from the Thames Embankment to the Strand, the other parallel to Adelphi-terrace as it now stands.

For some time about 50 workmen have been carting away 30 large van-loads of bottles a day. A representative of a firm of wine wholesalers said:

"We are sorry to see the last of the Arches. We have been on land other wares."

Ho Likes Hotel

Even though Robert C. Myers, former trusted clerk, disappeared from the Hotel De Anza, San Jose, Calif., $856 short in accounts, the hotel hasn't seen the last of him. Since his disappearance last August, he has returned to the hotel twice, police say, and each time held up the night crew and robbed the cash register.

Girl, Asleep 3 Years, May Awaken Soon

Beautiful Patricia Maguire, attacked by the dread Encephalitis germ and held in a deep sleep for more than three years, may yet awake to the world she left early in 1932.

Successful experiments in propagation of the sleeping sickness virus have been reported by two bacteriologists of the University of Rochester school of medicine and dentistry and physicians believe their work may eventually lead to the reawakening of the girl known as "The sleeping beauty."

The experiments are described by Dr. George Packer and Dr. James T. Syverston in Science, Medical publication.

In 18 months, Dr. Berry reported, they have grown in living cells the virus of human Encephalitis, termed the St. Louis type, "fatly strain. For the first time, they said, the germ was developed outside the human body."

Described as merely a "first step" the experiments were conducted by obtaining virus from human patients and transferring it into tissue culture made with the tissue of mice.

New Hope For Mother

Meanwhile, at her home in suburban Oak Park, her mother continued her care for Patricia with renewed hope.

"She is still the same beautiful girl she was before she became ill," her mother said.

"We have worked over her so that we know her muscles are still supple and firm. She will be strong when she awakes."

Some improvement in her daughter's condition has been noted by the mother. Occasionally she seems to stir from her lethargy and is able to answer simple questions in arithmetic by raising her fingers. She does not speak.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, was among those who held out hope for Patricia's eventual recovery. He said:

"Miss Maguire's condition remains the same—sleeping, barely moving except to eat and breathe. No prevention or cure for encephalitis has yet been found. I hope this new work may clear the road for such a discovery."

NINE HAVE ALREADY MADE ATTEMPT

The names of the 12 men who, with Mr. Hugh Rutledge, as their leader, will make the fifth attempt to reach the summit of Mount Everest early next year have now been divulged.

Mr. Rutledge explains below that this party is the strongest that could be got together for the purpose. Of the twelve:

Nine have already been to Mount Everest; Ten are known to be capable of climbing to at least 23,000 ft; and Eight are expected to be capable of going very high.

The party has been limited to 12 to reduce the difficulties of portage on the glaciers and to simplify the problems of control.

The members will be: Hugh Rutledge, leader (as in 1933).

F. S. Smythe, who will be making his fourth expedition to the Himalaya.

E. E. Shipton, a member of the 1933 Expedition and famous for his successful exploration last year, when he and Mr. Tilman were the first to penetrate the great glacier basin of Nanda Devi. Like Mr. Smythe, he will be on his fourth Himalayan expedition, and is probably the best acclimatized man in the party.

P. Wyn Harris, Kenya Civil Service. He has a great climbing record and went to about 28,000 feet in 1933.

E. G. H. Kempton, a master at Marlborough College. He has had long experience of both summer and winter mountaineering in the Alps and was with Mr. Shipton last year in the Everest region.

Dr. C. B. Warren, formerly of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Another mountaineer of great experience, who was with Mr. Shipton last year.

F. H. L. Wigram, medical student, St. Thomas's Hospital. A member of Mr. Shipton's party last year, and has a long record in the Alps.

Lieut. J. M. L. Gavin, Royal Engineers. Has never been to the Himalaya, but did extremely well in Mr. Smythe's party in the Alps last year. His medical report was so good that there is every hope that he will do well on the mountain.

Lieut. P. R. Oliver, South Waziristan Scouts. First made a name by taking a small expedition of his own to the Himalaya in 1933, when he made the second ascent of Trisul, 23,406 feet. Has also considerable experience in the Alps and was with Mr. Smythe last year.

Major C. J. Morris, late 2/3rd Gurkha Rifles. Assistant transport officer on the Mount Everest Expedition of 1922, and will be chief transport officer next year. He knows the ropes, speaks Nepali perfectly and Tibetan well, and will devote himself exclusively to transport work.

Dr. Noel Humphreys, who has climbed in Switzerland and East Africa, and recently returned after leading an expedition to Ellesmere Land. A man of proved endurance, with exceptional experience of medical work in out-of-the-way parts of the world.

Lieut. W. R. Smith-Windham, Royal Corps of Signals. One of the two wireless officers who accompanied the 1933 expedition. Though not normally a mountaineer, he reached Camp IV on that occasion. He will be in sole charge of wireless communications.

Qualities Required

This is the fifth expedition to go out, and with each successive effort the difficulty of the selection of personnel has perhaps been more plainly realized. The qualities necessary to enable a man to do well on Mount Everest—mountaineering experience and ability, endurance, capacity to acclimatise, equanimity and so on—are obvious essentials; but there is no complete test known to science whereby the possession of all these faculties by an individual can be thoroughly tested beforehand.

The problem of very high altitude mountaineering is so different from those which arise in expeditions to lesser ranges and to the Polar regions that it requires a special kind of solution.

It will readily be understood that practical experience on the spot provides a better test than theory. For this reason the Mount Everest Committee sent out last year a small preliminary expedition under the leadership of Mr. E. E. Shipton, whose task was to try out the mountaineering abilities, and especially the acclimatizing powers, of five men, all of whom had considerable Alpine experience.

The result was most illuminating. Three men were found to acclimatise well; the other two, though excellent mountaineers and splendid companions in any enterprise, found themselves unable to resist the lack of oxygen at altitudes of over 22,000 ft.

ANNUAL REPORT OF METROPOLITAN COUNTY COUNCIL

MARRIAGES BOOMED

SEARCHLIGHTS are turned on the life of London's millions and the way in which her vast sums of public money are spent in an interesting report issued by the London County Council.

The report tells that the county's population is falling. The estimated 1934 population was 4,230,200, a decline of 144,100 on the 1931 census figures, a drop being shown each year.

Where do the "genuine" Londoners go when they quit the county? They migrate into extra-London, which now has almost as many inhabitants as the county itself. During 1934 there were 68,853 live births in the county, which, while a slight increase on 1933, was much below the figure for any year extending back to 1924, when the number was 85,147.

Marriages boomed, however. There were 43,165 in 1934, the largest number for 10 years.

Despite the falling population, the public services have increased. The value of the property trebled between 1871 and 1935, and the expenditure of London local authorities has trebled only since the beginning of the century.

The 1935 assessable values on which the precepts of the central authorities are based total £61,330,832, which represents £14 10s. per head of the population. A penny rate produces £265,545. For the additional money they contribute Londoners have received municipal hospitals, where one of every four London births occurs; housing estates which contain 315,570 rooms; mental hospitals to accommodate 40,000 patients, and a fire brigade to protect property insured at £2,276,000,000.

Londoners continue to travel more, the average annual number of journeys in the latest available returns for each member of the population being 487. These consist of 129 by rail, 123 by tram and 235 by bus and coach.

The Post Office continues to import more money into London in the form of postal and money orders than it exports.

During the financial year 1934-35 such orders issued totalled 41,756,000, their value being £24,985,000; while those paid aggregated 92,771,000, to the value of £46,109,000.

While London's child population is falling, more children than ever are attending secondary schools. Of over 200,000 pupils in "polytechnics and evening institutes, 3,500 were unemployed.

Unemployment in London has fallen steadily from a maximum of 203,460 in January, 1932, to 146,620 in January, and 120,072 in September 1935. The numbers of people killed and injured in the streets have increased from 41,000 to 61,000 in ten years, the latter total including 1,448 persons killed.

NEW COUNTRY ESTABLISHED

SEPARATIST MOVE IN MONGOLIA

Peiping, Feb. 4. A circular telegram announcing the establishment of "Mengkuo" (Mongol Country) was issued from Changpai, capital of the new state on January 21, according to Chinese information reaching Peiping. The telegram is said to have been issued in the name of Prince Teh, by Jod-pajak. It was, however, detained by the Chinese Telegram Administration, according to La Journal de Pekin.

A portion of the telegram is published in the Asia People's Voice here this morning. According to this version, Jod-pajak explains that "this organization" is being established to meet the requirements of the circumstances and the desires of the people. It is dated the "730th Year after Genhis Khan," which would indicate an error in computation, since Genhis Khan succeeded in unifying Mongolia and establishing supremacy in 1206, 730 years ago—Union News.

Nanking, Feb. 4. The Executive Yuan has approved the appointment of Mr. Han Shih-ying as the new Chinese Ambassador to Japan.—Reuter.

Protection Money
Tientsin, Feb. 3. The Peiping Administration is paying the East Hopei Autonomous Government the sum of $100,000 per month as protection money. It was stated yesterday by Lieut.-Colonel Y. Ishii, S.F. Officer of the local Japanese G. I. force.

Return for this sum, Yin agrees not to molest the railway revenue or interfere with traffic on the line inside his territory, it was stated.—Union News.

Peiping Intelligence Protest
Peiping, Feb. 4. The Peiping Censorship Society today issued a manifesto objecting to the three-point policy of Mr. Koki Hirota, Japanese Foreign Minister, on the ground that such a policy means the colonisation of China.

"Acceptance of this policy will involve the subjugation not only of the northern provinces but the entire country," the manifesto declares. Mr. Hirota's policy is China's recognition of Manchuria as a Sino-Japanese campaign against the Communists and an economic alliance between China and Japan.—Union News.

U.S. NEUTRALITY CONTROVERSY

The controversy that is raging in the United States on the question of an extension of the provisions of the Neutrality Bill is easily understandable. On the one side, we have those who want America to follow a policy of isolation at all costs; on the other, there are ranged those who believe that the United States, although not a member of the League of Nations, should do her utmost to uphold the principles to which that body stands committed. In view of America's adherence to various pacts aimed at preventing war and stopping it once it breaks out, there should be doubt as to her attitude in such a contingency as has arisen by Italy openly disregarding her covenants not to resort to wars of aggression. Yet so strong is the American tradition not to become entangled in outside quarrels that there is natural hesitancy to take any step which might involve the United States in another war. Before the Neutrality Bill came into being, supporters of the League considered with dubious and anxious eyes the prospect of a rigid American refusal to allow any diminution of U.S. trading rights. But it was soon seen that the Roosevelt Government, at the first test, interpreted strict neutrality in such a way as to make possible co-operation with the League in collective measures to restrain a peace-breaker. In the proclamation which he issued in October, the President put an embargo on the export, to either country involved in the dispute, of arms, munitions and implements of war. The reasons for his action were plainly stated in the words that he was "obliged to recognise the simple and indisputable fact that Ethiopian and Italian armed forces are engaged in a combat which is creating a state of war within the intent and meaning of the joint resolution of Congress." He added, "In

THE captain, navigating officers, engineers, apprentices, and crews all hate the sea these days.

By that I mean they hate the conditions in which they have to work. Perhaps it has always been like that, and our ideas of the glories of the sea have just been based on ignorance.

After all we have been the world's premier maritime power for 284 years. The officers and men of the merchant navy have been the Royal Navy's first reserve throughout the centuries.

And now these officers and men want to leave the sea. So many of them are looking for "shore jobs" that when a £4 a week harbourmaster's job was vacant recently there were 500 applicants from the sea. The Officers' Federation has been called on to give advice to sailorsmen urging them not to put their little savings into mysterious businesses in order to find a shore job.

FURTHER than that, the federation and the National Union of Teachers combined to produce a pamphlet for parents,

NOTES OF THE DAY

PEACE, PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY

His Late Majesty King George V was a firm friend of the League of Nations, and during his lifetime showed that his own philosophy had much in common with that on which the international institution at Geneva was founded. Like most of the leading statesmen of his time, this Sovereign recognised that only by the paths of peace could a great Empire progress from strength to greater strength, and to lasting prosperity. Whenever he had the opportunity he stressed the need for world recognition of this truth. Like the Greeks, this Monarch appreciated that man's best works were accomplished in an atmosphere of security; and that security could only be assured when peace was guaranteed. It was for His Majesty's funeral that so many of the statesmen and rulers of Europe assembled in London recently, and the fact that advantage was taken of their presence there, and in Paris later, to institute conversations of a diplomatic character is easily understood. The criticism in some circles that these men came to mourn and not to talk politics seems rather far-fetched when one remembers how keen was the late Sovereign for any labour in the interests of peace. We are sure he would have been happy to think that, to crown his efforts in this sphere, his funeral had served to bring together men of prominence who could further the world's plans for security.

these specific circumstances, I desire it to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either belligerent do so at their own risk." Whatever may have been President Roosevelt's intentions in taking this course, the impression created was that the League could proceed with its measures against Italy, the defined aggressor, confident in the knowledge that the United States would not stand in the way of their effectiveness. When all is said and done, the observation made by the Chinese Ambassador to Washington, Mr. Alfred Sze, that a neutrality policy based on mere isolation cannot contribute to world orderliness, hits off the position to a nicety. It would be strange indeed were America to be regardless of the necessity of doing all that lies within her power to see that violators of world peace are not permitted a free hand.

DON'T

whose refrain might be described as, "Don't send your boy to sea, Mr. Worthington."

And the whole story from the water-front is coming to Parliament and the homes of the land-lubbers this year, early in February.

Parliament will be asked to amend the Merchant Service Acts, and the Board of Trade will be urged to apply safety regulations more rigorously.

Within the last year two of the greatest authorities on shipping in this country have assured us that all is well.

Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, member of a family distinguished in shipping, and the Minister responsible for the administration of our antiquated shipping laws, said on March 26, 1935, in the House of Commons, "Our manning scale and method is a model for the whole world."

Mind you, the Officers' (Merchant Navy) Federation in a recent report have irreverently added: "If our antiquated Merchant Shipping Acts provide a model for the world it is time the world followed a more up-to-date model in shipping matters!"

Mr. Runciman's advisers at the Board of Trade a few months later marred the value of Mr. Runciman's proud boast on the floor of the House.

For four months questions had been asked in the House as to whether subsidies from the annual £2,000,000 public fund for helping to build new ships would be given only to shipowners who observe the full conditions laid down by the National Maritime Board (whose functions I will describe later).

The reply given by Government spokesmen was evasive. And this is why! Two days after a demand had been made that subsidies should be given only to good shipowners who observe the rules, officials at the vessels in distress. In the last Board of Trade wrote to the National Maritime Board asking if an agreement about certain ships having to carry three foreign ships cannot be blamed, officers were still in force. "If Of the 1,068 rescued seamen, this agreement is not in effect only 176 were foreigners.

tive operation, on what date did it cease to be so?" asked the board responsible for the welfare of shipping.

The Board of Trade did not know in July 1935 whether an agreement of great importance to British shipping was in force or not. The fact is, this agreement has been in operation since 1929.

THEN, a month ago the Chamber of Shipping issued a remarkably reassuring document to prove that British shipping was safer than ever.

"With a view to correcting any wrong inferences that may be drawn from isolated disasters," explained the Chamber, "the following statement has been issued. Our shipping is now two and a half times as safe as before the war."

But the Chamber's statement was prepared three or four days before the end of 1935, and did not include 1935.

The National Union of Seamen, furious at what they call "whitewashing by the Chamber," have prepared statistics from official sources which include the toll of life on sea in 1935.

For the three years up to and including 1935, 186 lives were lost from British crews. That was the worst triennial return since 1924-26, when, by a coincidence, the toll was also 186.

"We are now beginning to feel the result of the reductions in manning of British ships in 1933," declare the seamen.

Round our coasts 1935 was the busiest year for the lifeboat service for nineteen years. There were 376 launches to serve the rules, officials at the vessels in distress. In the last Board of Trade wrote to the National Maritime Board asking if an agreement about certain ships having to carry three foreign ships cannot be blamed, officers were still in force. "If Of the 1,068 rescued seamen, this agreement is not in effect only 176 were foreigners.

HERE is why our shipping laws were antiquated. The Merchant Shipping Act was conceived in the ideas of Drake's time and the sailing ship days. It has not been amended since 1906.

In the meantime there have come into being motor ships, Diesel engine ships, oil burning ships, ships with super-heaters, and ships with self-trimming devices.

Britain, still the greatest maritime power in the world, only recently defined what a deck-hand is. But there is no law indicating wage scales for sailors, firemen, and stewards. Australia is more advanced than Britain in this respect.

A ship trading from a United Kingdom port carrying fewer than twelve passengers may go abroad from the Elbe to Brest over the world's most congested waterways without carrying a single qualified officer on the bridge or in the engine-room.

There are British ships trading between two foreign ports without a single Briton on board.

SINCE the war the Government has left control of the mercantile marine to the National Mercantile Board, on which are representatives of shipowners, officers, and seamen. But the board has no statutory authority, and shipowners can, and do, snap their fingers at its agreements.

Well, the officers have broken the tradition of their profession and have decided to fight along trade union lines. No more velvet-glove methods.

The officers' leaders, with grave deliberation, admit they have even considered the use of the strike weapon as an ultimate argument. They call it "laying-up" ship. Captains and chief engineers are exempt from this order.

What are their complaints? A British first officer receives £16 4s. a month. His Dutch counterpart receives £30 18s. 4d. a month; French £25 19s. 6d.; German £23 2s. 2d.; Danish £21 17s. 6d.; Italian £19 4s.; and Norwegian £19 2s. 11d. Only Belgium, Spain, Latvia, and Estonia, among European maritime nations, are lower in officers' wage scales than Britain, still the owner of 27.39 per cent. of the world's shipping.

THE second officer in one of the biggest liners leaving this country for the East, declared Earl Howe in the House of Lords, "responsible under the captain for the navigation of the ship, has a maximum salary of four guineas a week. A typist commands very nearly an equivalent salary."

They swear they will no longer tolerate conditions which permit secret wage cuts by owners whose conditions of employment are that full official wages are nominally paid, but 10 per cent. must be "voluntarily" handed back to the company; where four English apprentices work under a Chinese boatswain in a ship whose sole crew consists of four Chinese seamen; where the captain and officers are forced to do manual labour, leaving a seaman to steer without a look-out, with instructions to whistle the officers if another ship is sighted; where occasional passengers are carried and apprentices have to sleep in the captain's bathroom; and where the shipowners are not responsible for medical treatment for injuries if the victim is landed at an English port. (Shipowners are responsible for medical treatment in a foreign port.)

Officers want a pension. This would add less than 1 per cent. to the running costs of a tramp steamer, and less than ½ per cent. to the running costs of a liner.

EVERY statement I have made in this article is from an official document of one or other of the shipping bodies.

It is true that there are two big shipping companies who pay more than agreed rates; who pension their officers; who grant annual leave, and who fully return with the utmost consideration the loyalty of their staff.

They are the leaders in a new movement among shipowners to improve wages and introduce more liberal manning provisions.

The crusade to stamp out the bad owner will continue.

SALVATION ARMY HOME

ANNUAL MEETING YESTERDAY

It was disclosed at the annual meeting of the Salvation Army Home for Women and Girls yesterday evening, that General Evangeline Booth, Commander-in-Chief of the Army, has decided to inaugurate an active programme of Salvation Army operations in South China.

This announcement was made by Colonel George Davis, who has been sent to the Far East as representative of General Booth. Colonel Davis has been connected with the Salvation Army for over 40 years and has had extensive experience in America.

General Booth also appointed Brigadier and Mrs. J. E. Sansom to be Executive Officers for this new work in South China. They arrived in the Colony last Saturday.

Lady Southern, O.B.E., presided over yesterday's meeting. Others present included Lady Pollock, Mrs. T. King, Mrs. R. H. Kotevalli, Mrs. Bartholomew, Adjutant Brazier, Colonel George Davis and Brigadier J. E. Sansom.

The meeting was opened with the singing of a hymn, "Christ for the World, we sing," followed with a prayer by Captain Lemmon.

Lady Southern, as Chairman of the meeting, was introduced by Adjutant D. Brazier, who conveyed the appreciation of the Home to Lady Southern for being present.

Before reading the annual report, Brigadier J. E. Sansom said:

"I feel that this is really an historic occasion for the Salvation Army in Hongkong. Six years ago, I came to Hongkong to fulfil a promise made by General Bramwell Booth. Shortly after arrival, I was received by Lady Southern at Government House and, as a result of that interview, it was discussed as to how the Army could best meet the needs of the Colony as far as social activities are concerned.

"I am happy to welcome a representative of our National Headquarters, Colonel George Davis of America, who has been sent to the Far East as representative of General Evangeline Booth. He has had extensive experience. He is making a flying visit to Hongkong and the Far East.

"There is much to be done with the extension of the Army in Hongkong. I am not going to say what we are to do. I hope to have it done soon. This reminds me of the story of an officer at a Salvation Army meeting. He spoke for some length on what "we are going to do with this and that." After the young man sat down, an old officer said: "What I feel we need is not so much 'cockle-doodle-doo' but 'cockle-doodle-doo'."

Encouraging Year
In reading the annual report of the Salvation Army Home for Women and Girls, Brigadier J. E. Sansom said that the year 1935 was the most encouraging year of any of the six which had been passed since the Home was opened.

"The Home," said, "has accommodation for 50 girls, ill-treated, mis-led who have sought their freedom through the Secretary for Chinese Affairs, girls who have been forced into a life of shame, and deserted concubines. During the last year, 618 girls, from the Juvenile Court have passed through the Home. During the greater part of the year, the Home has been fortunate in having the splendid services of Dr. (Mrs.) Nash. She is one who knows how to do a kind thing in a kind way, and she has put Christian love into every treatment. We would like to publicly express our sincere appreciation of all she has done since she was officially appointed as the Home Doctor in June last.

"During the year, the Colonial Government has very kindly made grants towards the maintenance of the Home, and the girls have been busy with needlework which has brought in almost $1,000. After receiving these grants and the local industries income, there was still left a deficit of about $3,000 to meet which we have had to rely upon the interest and generosity of our friends in the Colony."

In the course of reading this report, Brigadier Sansom made reference to several pathetic cases which the Home has dealt with during the course of the year.

Following this, a Scripture Reading was given by Mrs. Brigadier Sansom, and the Male Voice Quartette rendered "Where'er Thou Leadest."

The Home girls then gave a song in Chinese to the well-known tune of "The Ash Grove."

Lady Southern's Speech
Lady Southern said: "My job is not to make a speech. We are all anxious to hear Brigadier Sansom and Colonel George Davis. So I shall let you off with a few words of welcome to Brigadier and Mrs. Sansom and Colonel Davis. These I must express because it was with Brigadier Sansom that I held the first chats that led to the establishment of the Salvation Army work in Hongkong. Dr. Kotevalli, who is unfortunately not here to-day will remember our first meeting at Government House when he with his usual helpfulness in all good causes supported the new idea. The report that has been read shows the concrete result of those meetings.

"The Salvation Army has been able to deal with types of girls and women, who desperately need help. Left to themselves many of them form a menace to the community or sink into utter misery. The Salvation Army makes them into useful members of society and restores their self respect.

"In the Salvation Army vocabulary the words 'I can't do it' do not exist. I can give you an example of this out of my own experience. I came across

Geneva on January 20, it decided that at the present juncture there was no action it could usefully take to promote a settlement of the dispute through agreement between the parties, but that it would not fall submit suggestions to the Council should more favourable circumstances arise. "With that decision His Majesty's Government were and are in entire agreement," he said.

NO NEGOTIATIONS

In reply to a separate question, Mr. Eden informed the House that His Majesty's Government were taking part in no negotiations for the settlement of the dispute at the present time. Turning to the Committee of Eighteen, he reminded the House that the Committee derived its authority from the Co-ordination Committee set up on October 10 last, on the recommendation of the League Assembly, to co-ordinate measures to be taken by members of the League in fulfillment of the obligations resting upon them under Article 16 of the Covenant. When the Committee of Eighteen met at Geneva on January 22, one of its tasks was to consider whether the embargo already existing on certain exports to Italy could effectively be extended to cover petroleum and its derivatives, by-products and residues. The Committee decided to convene a committee of experts to conduct a technical examination with a view to reporting at an early date on the effectiveness of extending the present measures of embargo to them.

"I need only add that no time will be lost in the preparation of this report. Existing economic and financial measures under Article 16 are being maintained and their operation is being closely followed."

MILITARY SUPPORT

Finally, Mr. Eden referred to the communication with other Governments on the question of military support to be afforded under Article 16, paragraph 3, of the Covenant to a State which, on account of its participation in measures of a financial and economic character, applied collectively against an aggressor, might be exposed to armed attack by that State and observed that the result of these exchanges, which had been brought to the notice of all States represented on the Co-ordination Committee and were now being published as a White Paper, was to reveal an identity of view in the interpretation of that part of the Covenant among the Governments of France, Great Britain, Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Spain.

others? Gosano's bowling, which was really good, especially coming as it did immediately after his long innings, was ignored.

Of course, one fully realises that even the Hongkong Press can't be perfect, but one is justified in expecting to find the leading sporting events faithfully recorded—and the I.R.C. K.C.C. game, at least, had an important bearing on the cricket League, had it not?

However, sports writers, like others, are not infallible, we suppose, and sometimes they do turn out excellent stuff. For instance, the report of the Lal Wah Cup football match, appearing in your issue of Monday, was really well-written, accurate and praiseworthy effort.

Robert T. Tsang.
H. Lee.

OUR REPLY

We are indebted to our correspondents for such absorbing data on the I.R.C. v. K.C.C. match. Unhappily they have neglected the local inaccuracies which we must, in a measure of self defence, point out. The Telegraph certainly did not "flash from its headlines the same old 'Lucky'." The line read "I.R.C. 'Lucky' Escape Defeat."

A statement of fact, not a comment. Furthermore while we greatly appreciate the concluding tribute concerning the report of the football match it must be observed that it was a Kotevalli Cup match and not a Lal Wah Cup game.

R. Abill's comment "somehow or other it was done" seems quite fair especially if our correspondents' statement "that only a miracle could save the Indians" holds good. They go on to describe the "miracle" in detail and in the same breath deny that "somehow or other it was done."

The particular phrase obviously refers to those last fifteen minutes when on our correspondents' own showing the light was so bad that "it was absurd to continue."

CHINESE WEDDING

COUPLE MARRIED AT LONDON EMBASSY

London, Feb. 4.
At a notable wedding to-day at the Chinese Embassy at which Mr. Quo Tai-chi officiated, Miss Liang, daughter of Mrs. Yen of Shanghai, married Mr. N. L. Liu, son of the manager of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company, who was called to the bar of the Inner Temple in December last. Yen was formerly Countess Kan, grand-daughter of Oei Tsi-sien, one of the Wong princes of the Tai-ping Rebellion. He subsequently fled to Java and made a fortune in a sugar plantation.

The bride wore a white satin gown of Chinese style, embroidered with silver, and a long train made of Szechuan silk, a tulip-leaf and a sheaf of lilies. The bridesmaids were Patricia, daughter of Dr. Wellington Koo and Miss Hsia, daughter of the former Chinese Minister to Brazil. The bride recently left school in Paris. She speaks French and English fluently.

The ceremony at the Chinese Embassy was very quiet due to the death of King George. Subsequently a large reception for Chinese and foreigners was held at Dorchester House Hotel. The newly married couple will spend their honeymoon in England for a year and then go to Shanghai.—Reuter.

MARSEILLES CRIME

TRIAL OF THREE CROATS OPENS TO-DAY

Aix-en-Provence, Feb. 4.

After one false start marked by incidents almost without precedent in French court history, the three Croatian terrorists charged with the murder of King Alexander, of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou at Marseilles on October 9, 1934, go on trial for a second time here to-morrow morning before a packed, heavily guarded Assizes court.

Again this staid little provincial town has become the centre of all eyes. Scores of newspapermen and photographers to-day flocked here from Paris and other capitals of Europe. Heavy detachments of mobile guards took up their posts about the Palais de Justice and at strategic points in town, while plainclothes policemen and inspectors of the Surete Nationale mingled with the crowds in the ordinarily quiet and austere streets, carefully watching all visitors and closely scrutinising the papers of those who sought to enter the court.

The prisoners who will be the chief actors in the drama of terror and international intrigue to be unfolded within the next few days are the following:

Zvonimir Pospichil, alias Novak, a chauffeur, born June 9, 1904, at Vukovina, Yugoslavia; arrested two days after the double assassination at Thonon, not far from the Franco-Swiss frontier;

Yvan Raitch, alias Bezes, a farmer, born January 5, 1903, at Kolodine, Yugoslavia, also arrested at Thonon; and Mio Krall, alias Malny, a mechanic, born September 17, 1903, at Koprivnica, Yugoslavia; arrested in the Fontainebleau forest by members of a huge man hunt a week after the crime.

On trial by default are three others who have been in French jails and whose extradition to France has been refused. These are:

Dr. Ante Pavlicich, leader and brains of the Oustachis, dread Croatian terrorist society to which the men on trial here belong; born July 14, 1889 at Bradine; now in prison in Turin;

Eugene Kvaternik, alias Kramer, Pavlicich's first lieutenant, born March 29, 1910, at Zagreb; also in prison at Turin; and Yvan Pavlovich, the gang's paymaster, born 1889 at Vienna; at present in prison in Austria.

Mysterious Blonde

The mysterious blonde beauty who was sought by the police of a dozen countries after the assassination is still missing. She is sought on a charge of having handled the gang's arsenal of guns and bombs and handed them over to the actual assassins on the morning of the crime at the Hotel Negre-Coste here in Aix.

The three Croatian defendants, new defence lawyer Maitre Andre Barthou to replace Maitre Georges Desbons, whose disbarment at the height of an uproarious court session brought a sensational end to the first trial last November 19. They face a new judge, Francois Lohon, an original magistrate, Judge de Broize having been retired in the interim. Many believe his retirement was a direct result of the incidents in court, but this cannot be confirmed at the Ministry of Justice.

Also the accused place their fate in the hands of a new panel of jurors, who replace the twelve bewildered residents of Provence officiating the first time.

What course the new trial will take is difficult to predict. It is recalled, however, that violent clashes between the defence and the prosecution followed the opening of the trial at the outset. Maitre Desbons objected violently to the Yugoslav interpreter chosen by the State, accusing him of being a Serbian police agent, and his word battle with the prosecution on that and other points became so heated that the prosecuting attorney, a friend of Desbons, was charged with contempt of court.

These clashes continued on the second and last day, further inflamed by the fact that a bailiff handed the jury an anonymous letter and newspaper clipping of Maitre Desbons demanding that note be taken. In this argument the prosecutor insisted that Desbons was behind the submission of the letter and demanded that he be disbarred. In defending himself Desbons used language which the court construed as an insult to French justice and he was disbarred "for impeding justice and employing abusive language."

The prisoners refused a lawyer appointed by the Court, went on a hunger strike and had to be fed forcibly. They finally agreed to be defended by Maitre Andre Barthou, a friend and collaborator of Desbons, but instead of resuming the trial the court postponed it until the next session of the Assizes, which begins to-morrow.—United Press.

"INACCURACIES" ALLEGED

What Really Happened GAME WAS WELL SAVED

Below will be found a letter from two spectators of the I.R.C. v. K.C.C. first division league cricket match on Saturday who firstly accuse the Telegraph of publishing an unfair and inaccurate report of the game in yesterday's issues and then offer a certain amount of detailed description of how the I.R.C. saved the game.

Sir—Mistakes and inaccuracies in the sporting section of the local press are not unknown and sometimes may be excusable, but two reports of the cricket matches played on Saturday were unusually grim and, in one case, unfair and cannot pass without comment.

We will take the I.R.C. v. K.C.C. game at Soekunpoo first. We were watching throughout the latter part of the game in a car from different angles, and therefore speak with first-hand knowledge of what we write. Incidentally, neither of us are members of these two clubs, though we have friends in both, and we are therefore writing quite impartially. We both had the impression after the match that the Indians had done very well to force a draw, and that three of their side, in particular, deserved great credit for the part they played. When we read the newspaper accounts of the game, however, we received a surprise. "Decidedly lucky", "lucky draw", "extremely lucky", these expressions were freely used. We beg to disagree flatly. Kowloon were perhaps unlucky in not having won, but the inference in the press reports that the Indians were continuously watched over by the Goddess of Luck is not correct.

At approximately five o'clock what chance the home side may have had of winning the game were practically gone. Their best batsman, Nazarin, was out for a second time, and their captain failed. At 5.20 the match was well on the way to being won and lost. At just on 5.35 there may be some disagreement between the Pavilion clock and our watches and we are not being dogmatic about the times only a miracle could save the Indians, or so it looked. Their keeper and sound bat (S. A. Ismail, we think) got out. The position now was that with two of their youngest bats and Mr. T. M. Nazarin, the Indian captain, and the word hitter, i.e., a man who would probably not have lasted one over under the circumstances—go in, there was roughly forty odd minutes of play left.

NEVER LOOKED LIKE GETTING OUT
At this stage Arculli went in to partner his mate. They stayed together some twenty minutes, during which they never looked like getting out, and it was a surprise to us when one of them swung at a full toss and was bowled. There was absolutely nothing lucky or fluky about their work. On the contrary, everything was against them.

K. Nazarin succeeded (we took the trouble to verify the names in the press reports and they seem correct enough), with 22 minutes to go, if there was nothing "chancey" about the first partnership there was even less about this—to all intents and purposes the last stand. Every ball was dealt with unflinchingly as it should have been—either left severely alone or stopped dead. Nazarin played back mostly, while Arculli preferred to smother the ball at its pitch. Both were remarkably cool and unflustered, though Arculli made no secret of the fact that he knew he was facing with a stiff task. He was somewhat vocal, his "No's", "Well Let's", and "Well Stopped's" being easily audible from the road; they must have been disconcerting to the Kowloonites, but there is, so far as I know, nothing in the rules against exercising the lungs, so long as it stops short of warbling!

The light became worse and worse; in fact, in the last ten or fifteen minutes it was absurd to have continued. Kowloon crowded in until they were almost on top of the batsmen and it must have been a temptation to have tried to kill one or two of them, but nobly they restrained themselves and the end came with them still in triumphant possession—practically untroubled. In all, Mr. Arculli batted some 25 minutes, Y. el Arculli 40, K. Nazarin 22, in the face of very heavy odds and not one of them gave the slightest chance, the first lapse of the first-named being his last. Where then is the lucky part of it? If it is maintained that Kowloon were unlucky in not being able to force a draw after all their efforts, we would not argue, but all these headlines about the Indians' luck is undoubtedly a disparagement to these three match-savers, if not to the whole of the Home Team.

THE COMPLAINT

We had hoped to see in your cricket notes of to-day a fairer account but instead we saw the best part of your sports page devoted to an "interesting" point of cricket law, the intricacy or interest of which we fail utterly to appreciate, and what there was about the actual play reflects no credit on the Indian K.C. at all.

"R. Abbot" is, we believe, the cricket scribe of Hongkong, and one would have thought he would have paid a little more attention to detail and accuracy, but the same old "lucky" flashed from the headlines and in the body of the report, "somehow or other it was done".

The other "grouse" is your aforementioned correspondent's critique of the "Varsity" game. (We watched the "Varsity" but, subsequently going down to Soekunpoo to see the Indian innings.)

It says Gosano had a nice, hard-hitting 90. Incidentally it was 91, but we will pass that. Does that description include some really beautiful "bow" shot and two chances at least which should have been held, not to mention (Continued on Page 7.)

BISLEY BETTER FOR TERRITORIALS

Welcome Concessions By The War Office

The War Office has authorized pay and allowances to be drawn by certain categories of the Territorial Force who wish to compete at Bisley. This concession, which is a definite part of the Army Council's scheme to encourage the Bisley form of shooting, should, together with the free issue of the Pattern '14 rifle, do much to remove existing grievances and make it possible for Territorials to be once more adequately represented amongst the marksmen of the Empire, writes a London daily.

BASEBALL PLANS

London League Teams

Mr. S. E. Parkes, who controls Rugby League's activities in London, has decided to take a hand in the new London baseball movement and will establish two teams in membership with the London Major Baseball League. George Neple, Streatham and Mitcham's famous New Zealand Rugby player, is also a baseball expert, one of the several among London Rugby League contingent and other players will be imported from Canada.

To-day's Badminton Programme

MEN'S DOUBLES ENCOUNTERS

(By "Veritas").

Errors in the printing of the official fixture book apparently constitute the reason why Eliot Hall "A" have no games scheduled between February 5 and March 4 in the men's doubles division of the badminton league.

In fact it appears that the book provides them with three matches short of the full programme, while both Eliot Hall "B" and Kowloon Tong have only 22 matches down for decision. The programme should consist of 24 matches.

The Hon. Secretary of the Badminton Association has expressed the hope that Eliot Hall "A" will make every effort to fix matches by mutual arrangement during the next four weeks.

This evening they are due to meet Eliot Hall "B", while three other games are down for decision. St. John's entertain Kowloon Tong and appear safe for a win, while Fire Brigade may be confronted with a ticklish proposition when they engage V.I.C. at the Central Police Station.

St. Andrew's "A" have a home game with Talkoo, but it is not known whether the Dockyard club can turn out a team. At the time of writing St. Andrew's had heard nothing from Talkoo. If the programme goes off according to arrangement the following games will be played.

BIGGEST CRICKET GROUND PLAN

Melbourne Prepares For 100,000 Crowd

Melbourne, Jan. 9.
Plans to make the Melbourne Cricket Ground one of the largest in the world have been approved by the trustees of the ground, who are to spend £100,000 for alterations to enable 100,000 people to be accommodated.

Double-decker concrete stands will be built with room for 75,000 spectators. At least 35,000 of these will be seated, and most of them will be under cover. All the improvements will be completed late in the year, in readiness for the visit of the next England team. It is understood that the fears of the Cricket Association that the light may be affected by the high buildings at both ends of the pitch will be overcome. It is not thought that the batsman's line of vision will be obstructed. The buildings will be erected on similar lines to those existing in some American stands. The lower deck will be 20 feet high, and the upper deck

RECREIO WIN

BEAT S. AND S. HOME

LAST NIGHT'S BADMINTON

Recreio "B" conceded but one game in their men's doubles badminton league match against the Sailors and Soldiers' Home on the latter's court last night.

J. J. Xavier and E. A. R. Alves, Recreio's third pair lost to J. Hall and M. Merritt of the S. and S. Home first string by 21-18.

H. H. Harris and J. Heath put up some excellent performances for the losers, earning double figures in all three games, but the Recreio were always the better team. Scores:—

J. Hall and M. Merritt (S. and S. Home) lost to H. A. Barros and A. E. Xavier 5-21
lost to A. J. Basto and E. F. J. Remedios 3-21

AUSTRALIAN HORSE SOLD FOR 5,500 GUINEAS

Marabou, the winner of the 1935 Melbourne Cup, has just been bought at auction in Melbourne by Mr. C. B. Kellow, of that city, for 5,500 guineas. Mr. Kellow owned the dark, winner of the Cup in 1933, says Australian News. He also gave the highest price ever paid for a horse in Australia when he bought Horole which subsequently returned more than that sum in stake money alone.

MACAO WIN

AGAINST H.K. CLUB

(Our Own Correspondent)

Macao, Feb. 2.
Local interest in hockey was displayed this afternoon when a large crowd turned out to witness a friendly encounter here, H.E. the Acting Governor of Macao, Dr. J. Pereira Barbosa, being among the spectators.

The match was between the first teams of the Macao Hockey Club and the Hongkong Hockey Club, the visitors being defeated by three goals to one.

The first two goals registered for the home team were scored in quick succession after ten minutes of play. A. Angelo was responsible for the first and the second was scored by Lucrécia Costa from a short corner. A feature of the play was the constant dribbling as the ball was carried up and down the field. The visitors' defence was strong, but the work of the forward line can only be described as patchy. Fowler, at right wing, was unfortunate to miss scoring just before the interval.

STRONG HALF BACK LINES

Hardly had a minute passed after play was resumed, when a breakaway by the Macao forwards put the home team further ahead with a splendid goal by P. Angelo.

Despite being three goals down, the visitors fought back and were rewarded when Woodhouse penetrated the house defence and reduced Macao's lead with a smart goal.

Both half-back lines were seen to advantage, Bates, at centre-half for Hongkong, being particularly prominent. On the other hand, his opposite number, P. Angelo, coped admirably with the stickwork of the Hongkong forwards time and again.

Both sets of forwards spoiled many promising chances by faulty distribution and missed several chances of adding to their respective scores. In both goals, Shields and Almada had to keep constantly on the alert.

Although weakened by the absence of the two forwards, the visitors put up a determined struggle throughout. They thoroughly enjoyed the match and expressed the hope that the opportunity of engaging in another tussle will soon be afforded them.

SKI-JUMPER COVERS 270 FEET

S. Erickson Defeats Title Holder

Garmish, Feb. 3.
Leaping through the air over a distance of 81 metres, or nearly 270 feet, Sven Erickson, a Swedish snow-shoe star, yesterday won the special international ski-jumping contest, held in the "Great Olympic Jump" 111 metres (about 365 feet) high.

Birger Rund of Norway, holding the world's ski-jumping title was second, and the United States sportsman Roy Mikkelsen came in third. The distance of the jump was shortened yesterday due to heavy rain which spoilt the snow.

BAER THINKS HE CAN BEAT LOUIS—

If He Trained For A Year MANAGER NOT SO OPTIMISTIC BROTHER MIGHT DO IT

Fair Oaks, Calif. Feb. 4.

Max Baer would be willing to meet Joe Louis again on a "Winner take all" basis if the Brown bomber should win the World's heavyweight championship.

"I don't care anything about fighting again—never did like to fight—but if Louis wins the title I'd like to meet him, winner take all," the former champion told me while sipping a cocktail before dinner in Ancel Hoffman's elaborate Spanish-type ranch house.

"Beat him?" Baer mused. "Well, maybe, if I could get my hands in shape. Boy, if I could get a crack at him with the understanding that the winner copper all the receipts, I'd cut out smoking, work hard and get in better shape than I ever was before."

NOT SO ENTHUSIASTIC

Ancel Hoffman, manager and sort of foster father of the Baers, Max and Buddy, doesn't share the playboy fighter's enthusiasm, although he concedes Max "a chance" if he trained properly.

"It would take him a year of hard work to get in shape," Ancel said. "If I could take him into the mountains for a year, keep him away from everybody and really make him work, I think he might stand a chance of beating Louis. I doubt if Max would work hard enough, though. He's too lazy."

"Max took the worst beating from Louis that I ever saw a man take from anybody. He doesn't keep his hands up. He's easy to hit and Louis certainly hit him plenty. I don't want him to fight again unless he's in shape. I wouldn't want him to get punch drunk."

And Max won't fight again, either—unless he could meet Louis on a winner take all basis after the sensational Detroit negro has moved to the top.

BUDDY BAER MORE LIKELY

Buddy Baer? Now there's some one to think about when casting around for a "white hope" in Hoffman's opinion.

Buddy is too young and inexperienced now, but after two more years of training and fights, he may develop sufficiently to warrant a crack at Louis.

"Buddy is a serious worker," Hoffman said. "He keeps his hands up and he can take punishment. There's no heavyweight now who can beat Louis, but I believe Buddy is the most promising prospect. I intend to bring him along slowly and carefully."

Ancel is trying to find a good trainer and sparring mate for Buddy. Tommy Loughran would be the best bet, he believes. Max is no good as a boxing partner for Buddy, because the two brothers lose their tempers when in the ring together and start fighting viciously. Hoffman let them box together twice, but he will not risk it again.

Baer and Hoffman have been deluged with requests from fans all over the world to attempt a comeback. Max is proud of an apple box full of Christmas cards. Hoffman's daughter handles his fan mail which continues to pour in daily. Much of it comes from promoters seeking to sell him stock.

The huge-shouldered fighter likes to kid about his match with Louis. He has a toy which his mother sent him, and he takes delight in winding it up and watching the tin fighters—white and black—swing at each other. One or the other gets knocked down before the spring unwinds.

"Sometimes I knock Louis out; sometimes he stops me," Max chuckles. "Depends upon my hands."

WIFE'S INFLUENCE

More interested in the stage than in fighting Max spends his time reading plays, practising imitations and acting. He plays golf nearly every day and contract with his wife, Mary, and the Hoffmans every other night. He seldom is seen in night clubs. Retiring early as a rule, he reads in bed for hours.

Mary Sullivan Baer had had a restraining influence. Charming, good natured, she overlooks his sarcastic jibes, regards him as a playful little boy who loves to act. Their relations are harmonious.

"She's the grandest girl in the world," Max said. "I was awfully lucky to get her."

Hoffman has invested Baer's money in annuities. Max can't touch it. Otherwise he would spend it all. "He'll have a nice income for life," Ancel said, "and until the investments begin paying him interest, he can live comfortably on his income from benefits, refereeing and possibly some acting." —United Press.

WIRELESS v. LINCOLN
York

These Stanford football players weren't fooling in final practice sessions for the Rose Bowl classic, but were taking the game mighty seriously. Bobby Grayson and Keith Topping have a pass interception planned for the famed S. M. U. aerial attack.

FRANCE'S FRANTIC SEARCH FOR DAVIS CUP TALENT

MANY YOUNG PLAYERS DISAPPOINT: BOROTRA STILL BEATS THEM

Paris, Feb. 3. Spurred on by the stinging defeats absorbed by its net players in the international matches of the past season, France is determined to be fully prepared for this year's campaign.

The board of strategy of the French Tennis Federation has put its players into the hands of its most competent coaches for immediate intensive training, with great emphasis to be paid to the more promising of the younger players.

In addition to having players in excellent shape by the time the Davis Cup matches come around in May, the Federation hopes furthermore to have definitely discovered players best fitted for the singles and doubles.

YOUNGSTERS NOT PROMISING

What actually induced the Federation to take this step was the recent indoor Canet Cup play, the last official tournament of 1935. With only one exception, the youngsters failed to get anywhere, and the exception, 16-year-old lanky Bernard Destremou was eliminated in the semi-finals. It was the veteran Jean Borotra who won the singles, men's and mixed doubles.

If Borotra, who is no longer ranked in the singles, defeated the youngsters and the pick of the French stars, what will the ranking players of other countries do to them, reasoned the Federation. To make it much worse, French junior champion Destremou was eliminated in the semi-finals. It was the veteran Jean Borotra who won the singles, men's and mixed doubles.

ATTITUDE PERILS FUTURE

A season of local successes has made him aloof, independent and headstrong. He has refused with consistency to accept any counsel or advice from those who are in a position to give it. He has plenty to learn before he can be given the responsibility of representing his country in an international match. His attitude has irritated everyone and even the French sporting press has made him its special target.

When the players were ordered to go into immediate training, Destremou was excepted. An official stated that it would be a waste of time or money to coach Destremou while he remains in the clouds.

The only man sure of his Davis Cup post is left-handed Christian Bousquet. The other post will probably go to either cocky Andre Merlin or south-paw Marcel Bernard.

WINTER OLYMPICS

FRANCE VERY CONFIDENT

EXPECT TO WIN SOME EVENTS

Paris, Feb. 3.

Great confidence is expressed in France in the ability of her athletes to take a number of firsts in the Winter Olympics which open at Garmisch-Partenkirchen on February 6.

While France is being represented at the Games by probably the strongest team in her history, it is very doubtful whether her athletes will score so much as a single triumph due to the presence of the strong Austrian, Finnish, German, Swedish and Swiss teams.

The French delegation will consist of 42 athletes and 17 official attendants. Included in this total of 59, is a detachment of six Alpine Infantrymen, who will compete in the military ski races.

ICE-HOCKEY STRENGTH

As a result of hastily naturalising three Canadian "rangers," only a few weeks ago, France's strongest bet will be her ice-hockey team. These three lads, who hail from Montreal, have been playing on Paris teams for the last few seasons. Two of them, Yvon Cadorette and Paul Gagnon, are wings, and the third, strong, husky Andre Belhumeur is a back. The naturalisation may have been hasty but it will certainly stick for the three will be obliged to do their military service next spring.

Of the remaining 11 players who are being sent to Garmisch, there are only three or four who can wield the puck in a style faintly reminiscent of that displayed by American and Canadian stars. French Sextet will also be deplorably weak at the goal.

Despite the several weaknesses, the French have the strongest team on the continent, thanks to the presence of the three Canadian "rangers," and they will probably win the European title for they could never hold the Canadian or American sextets.

France will have only one skier who can hope to hold his own against the Scandinavians and German aces. He is Andre Allais, 20 who was placed second last winter in the world championships at Megeven. He is champion of France at slalom, but it is in the decent speed races where he is expected to score. Andre Vignoles, who is superior to Allais, is not eligible for the games, for he is an instructor and thereby ruled out.

OUT OF RUNNING

France's Alpine Infantry men are strong but again the superior teams of other competing nations put the French out of running. The Bobleigh is an open boat with the Germans favoured in both the four-men and two-men bobs. The French are dark horses in the Bobleigh.

France will have no representatives in either ice-skating races or figure events. M. and Mme. Brunet-Joly, who won the paired fancy skating at the last Olympics at Los Angeles, and were the sole entrants chosen for the fancy skating in February, dealt a severe blow to France's hopes when they refused to join the French team.

Brunet-Joly explained that the French Olympic Federation refused to finance them for the period of training necessary to compete. The French Olympic body naturally had to turn down such a request for it had a distinct odour of professionalism.

Undoubtedly the Brunet-Joly couple's request was not more exigent than those made by most of the present day figure skating stars. It was not their request that had to be condemned but their method.—United Press.

F.A. COUNCIL

Shield Semi-Finals Draw To-day

The monthly meeting of the Council of the Hongkong Football Association will be held this afternoon, when the draw for the semi-final rounds of the Hongkong F.A. Shield will be made. The matches will be played on Saturday, February 22.

Among other business in the agenda is the selection of a team and a ground for the Governor's Cup match to be played on Saturday, and a ground for the Lai Wah Cup final between the Navy and the Chinese on March 8.

New Zealand Rugby Team Impresses

FINE DISPLAY AT KOSHIE

The New Zealand University Rugby Football team won the opening match of their Japanese tour on Sunday, January 26, when they beat All-Kwansai at Koshien by five goals and two tries (31 points) to a try (three points).

The spectators saw about 12 minutes of the game at that, so that in belatedly living up to advance notices and the impression they created in training, the tourists also conclusively answered the question whether their tour stay the course against hard-as-nails Japanese opposition, says "Corinthian" in the Japan Chronicle.

Practically all the good football, certainly all the spectacular football with the exception of a couple of electrifying runs by Inaba and a marvellous kick by Kinoshita was packed into these twelve minutes. Scoring four goals and a try, the tourists thus piled up the points at the rate of two a minute, and in bettering the Australians' victory in the corresponding fixture of two seasons ago, served notice that they may make a clean sweep of all their matches. For not even the national side will be able to stem the sort of football the tourists played in the closing minutes. It was irresistible, grand smashing attacks that had a touch of inspiration about them.

Player Injured
J. M. Watt, one of the New Zealand Rugby football tourists, was taken ill after the match and was confined to bed in the Koshien Hotel. Watt played in the game, but was not injured. O. W. Chapman, a medical company, while the team continued on its tour.

TRIALS TO COMMENCE

HONGKONG FINDING BEST TEAM TO PLAY NEW ZEALAND

The usual Wednesday fixture for the Hongkong Football Club "A" XV has been cancelled and a trial game will be played to-day with a view to selecting the best possible XV to represent the Colony in the return game against the New Zealand Universities on February 21.

The probable team is:
L. G. Robertson: Fus. Floyd, Surg. Lieut. Benson, P. G. Frost, H. R. McGilchrist, Lieut. R. Butler, Cpl. Precoe and J. L. Bonnar: Lt. Robinson, W. E. Peers, Lieut. Lincoln, A. P. Walkden, Cpl. Cullinan, Fus. Morgan, Capt. Gillespie, Lt/Cpl. Harrison.

The possible team is:
There are several absentees who were originally chosen for places in the above teams, notably Lieut. J. Rice Evans and A. B. Evans who were chosen for the probabilities and J. H. McElney and E. B. Gammell who were chosen for the probabilities.

The kick off is 5 p.m. on the Club ground.

Wealth Of Information In H.K.R.A. Bulletin

The January issue of the Hongkong Rifle Association Bulletin again contains a wealth of information about rifle shooting in the Colony. The Association's activities during the month are reviewed, and full details are given in this issue of the Association Prize Meeting of 1936 which will be held on the Army Ranges at Kowloon City, commencing on April 30.

An interesting feature is the illustrated supplement, which shows the Hongkong team for the N.R.A. Overseas Match and the various teams which participated in the Team Competition held on November 20 last year.

Further hints on the Aperture Sight are given to beginners by C.A.G. who last article on the same subject was much appreciated. The Bulletin should prove of great interest to every member of the Hongkong Rifle Association.

SERIAL STORY—

BARGAIN BRIDIE

by KATHARINE HAVLAND-TAYLOR

CHAPTER XLVII

There was a moon and after dinner Elinor led the way to the terrace. Harriet and Bob Telford settled themselves beside her, watching the yellow disc rise in the sky. Higgins brought their coffee to them and presently Bessie and Jim Throppe and their boys arrived.

Sexton, who was the youngest and thus able to forget old times, was talking about a motor boat. The other boys spoke eagerly of college in the fall. Bessie listened happily. She knew that coming she had said to Elinor that day had made a decided difference. Bessie had seen the changed light in the girl's eyes, a little trembling of her lips. Poor Elinor who was so young, with so much of life to learn!

"We must be going now," Bessie said when the clock struck 10. "After the Thropes had gone, singing on their way down the hill like ancient, travelling minstrels, Elinor went upstairs. For a long while she stood by the window of her darkened room looking over the moonlit world below."

That afternoon Bessie had nodded toward Gerald, playing on the bench with Sexton, and said, "Elinor, I feel that you're misinterpreting something and Jim's forbidden me to say more. He says Barrett would explain if he dared and I must not—Barrett won't. But, dear, even if the situation were as it seems, you know a woman's job is to help a man make his future worth while. It isn't right to brood over the past. Everything Harriet can become is in your hands. What he was before you knew him—Elinor had begun to tremble. She had not wanted to talk about that even to Bessie. Nevertheless Bessie went on. "It's natural enough for you to be jealous about what has been but you don't really love, my dear, and you want to help the person you love to cover old wounds and forget them. If Gerald is Harriet's son you'll never regret making Barrett as happy as he can be about it. And when you're as old as I am you'll realize that the only times you've been hurt were when you made others downcast by showing them that they hurt you. Barrett loves you. Anyone can see that!"

Elinor had begun to cry. "I do love him, Aunt Bessie," she whimpered. "But—"

They had talked for an hour and Bessie had said that in some way Elinor had begun to understand the things she longed to tell her and could not.

It was half past 10 when Barrett mounted the stairs. Bob Telford had gone to his room half an hour earlier.

There was a telegram for Elinor and Harriet, not wishing to disturb her, decided to take it beneath her door. He had written to do and he knew that he could not sleep. Long training had made it possible for him to concentrate and thereby gain a sort of relief. He worked but his mind was not really on his work. Again and again, as he sat writing, his heart would slow and the objects he was describing—objects he had unearthed after centuries of hiding in the earth—would fade to be replaced by Elinor's face.

Hard moments those moments when he was all he could do was sit at his desk. Often they left him spent and shaking. It was the fullness of the situation that troubled him, the fact that it was all so unnecessary and was making Elinor so miserable.

He tapped on her door and to his surprise found her sitting up. "Come in," she repeated. "It's—Barrett," he explained. "Come in," she repeated. "He opened the door. She was sitting up in bed, the light from a lamp beside her shining down on her hair."

"Leave me a moment to spare?" she asked. "Of course." He didn't understand this. "I brought up a telegram that came for you," he said. Elinor took it and he sat down in a chair that was near her. She tore open the envelope with its small transparent window. Then, "Mother's married!" she gasped.

She gave him the message and he read it with a certain grim amusement. Lida had married a Chicago merchant whose name Barrett knew well—a Bluebeard Croesus with a string of discarded wives in his cupboard. He would, Barrett reflected, be a match even for Lida.

"Well!" he said, and could think of no more suitable comment. "I expect that—quite something like it," Elinor admitted, "but not quite so soon." She grew silent then. Barrett felt she was trying to say something more and that it was not easy for her to begin.

He had his own speech to make and he wanted to get it over. "Elinor," he said, and then he waited. "Yes?" Why was she looking at him in that way? It was dangerous for both of them.

"Elinor, I want to tell you that I respect you wholly and in every way. I haven't always. I had an idea that you were carrying on some sort of affair with Bob Telford. I'm thoroughly ashamed of that now and I hope you can forgive me. I know how fine you are in every way and have always been. I—" he paused, baulded. "But, Barrett! I couldn't do a thing like that!" she said quickly. "I couldn't. I've seen too much of it to be able to indulge in it myself. I've been square—that way, but not in others. I've been—small, Barrett! I know I have."

"If you saw that her lips were trembling, 'I don't see that—' he disagreed.

"Yes, you do! Or you could—if you would I've made you so unhappy!"

"That wasn't your fault," he assured her. "I know I hurt you—deperately."

She shook her head violently. "I hurt myself," she confessed unsteadily. "By acting the way I have."

She began to cry. She had cried so often in the last weeks. Barrett moved toward her; he could not help it. He settled on the edge of the bed and drew her into his arms. He patted her back with one big hand, while the other pressed close to him with the other. His own eyes were stinging.

"I want to make you happy," he heard her say brokenly. "If you're happy then I will be," he told her, hardly more steadily. "In a little time, Barrett," she said, "I'll be just as I was—before. I need a little more time to get adjusted."

"Darling!" He didn't intend that his arm should tighten but it did. He hid his face against her hair. He managed to say, "It's been—hell."

"I love you," Elinor said. Then, "Barrett! Barrett!" for she had felt the sob that shook him. She remembered Bessie's words. Her arms were around him now, holding him tightly. Bessie had said you only loved truly when you wanted to help the one you loved to forget old wounds. Well, Elinor knew that she loved Barrett now. He raised his face from her shoulder. "I'm sorry, Elinor," he said.

"Nothing matters but your happiness!" She broke in as he paused. She ran an unsteady hand over his dear, stiff sandy-haired hair. She tried to smile at him. His lips twitched; yet again his eyes filled. He kissed her hands then, showing in the way he kissed them all the hunger he had felt, all the great love he had for her. He would be endlessly patient, he declared, if only she would assure him that some day she might feel as she had before. He would do everything—everything—to make it easy. She was the one woman in his life. There was no one else. There never could be any other. He would never forgive himself for having doubted her fidelity.

"I worship you!" he had said roughly, then hid his face once more against her shoulder. (To be concluded.)

V.D.M.A. AFFAIRS

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS BY ST. ANDREW'S BRANCH

The St. Andrew's Branch of the Victoria-Donovan Missionary Association held its annual meeting in the Church hall last evening. The Rev. J. R. Higgs, Vicar of St. Andrew's, in the chair.

Miss Armstrong, the Hon. Secretary, said satisfactory progress had been maintained by the branch throughout the past year. The branch continued to take an interest in relief work up-country, forwarding a number of mosquito nets for use in malarial infested districts, in addition to other help.

At the suggestion of the branch, the central body of the V.D.M.A. organized a mission at Cheung Chau, which proved both enjoyable and useful.

The function organized to welcome Bishop Hall was a great success, the attendance exceeding all expectations. During the year, whilst and non-jugger, and other social functions were held, which were highly successful, and the funds obtained were put to good use.

The report and accounts were unanimously adopted.

The Chairman then thanked Miss Armstrong for the invaluable work rendered by her as Hon. Secretary, and expressed regret that she had to relinquish this position owing to her leaving for home in the near future.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:
 Hon. Secretary: Miss J. Smith.

KWEICHOW REDS

CONCERN FOR SAFETY OF MISSIONARIES

Shanghai, Feb. 4.—Chinese reports from Kweichow (capital of Kweichow) say that the Kweichow provincial troops have recovered Hsiueh, twenty miles west of Kweichow from the invading Communists. The defeated Reds are stated to have retreated to Lukwang, about fifteen miles west of Hsiueh.

Missionaries Endangered

With Kweichow facing the danger of being captured by Reds, anxiety is being felt here for the safety of the foreign missionaries there.

As far as it can be learned from the Catholic Mission here, two French Bishops, seven priests and ten Canadian Sisters are stationed at Kweichow. They are believed to be still there.

British and American missionaries, however, have already evacuated. The latter include Rev. Mr. Daniel Crafts and his wife, of the China Inland Mission, who evacuated for Szechuen.

German priests at Tungjen and other parts in north-east Kweichow evacuated several months ago.

It is noteworthy that the Catholic Mission suffered heavily during the 1935 Red invasion in Kweichow in May 1935, when churches at Tungjen and Hualien and other cities were completely destroyed.

It is anticipated that if the Reds capture Kweichow their next objective will be Anshun, west of Kweichow.

Reds in Retreat

Canton, Feb. 4.—Messages received here from Kweichow authorities state that fighting between the Reds and the Central Government forces raged at Mao-tung. The Government forces after routing the invaders recaptured Chieh-shui. It is believed the Reds are now attempting to reach the Yunnan border in order to join the Yunnan under Chu Teh, and then to establish a 'Soviet regime there.

Both Szechuen and Yunnan are reinforcing the frontiers and massing troops along the borders to repulse the invaders. Three divisions of Yunnan troops are reported to be concentrating on the border. It is also stated that General Liu Hsiang has despatched eight Szechuen planes to Kweichow to assist the Central Government forces to bomb the Reds.

HELENA MAY CONCERT

EXCELLENT PROGRAMME FOR TO-MORROW

Music-lovers are reminded that the Helena May concert season closes in March, and none should miss the last opportunities of enjoying some notable and varied programmes before the artistically barren summer begins.

This Thursday we shall have the pleasure of hearing a new-comer, Mrs. McGowan (mezzo-soprano) as well as three artists already well known and popular in the Colony—Miss Caroline Braga (piano), Mrs. Evello and Mrs. Arnold (piano and cello). The programme is given below, and should attract all those who have attended the previous concerts and many who have not taken advantage of them. Hongkong's concert audiences are enthusiastic, but casual, and many people forget until too late that there are only a dozen or so opportunities a year to hear the many really talented amateurs while they are with us. The concerts are timed at 5.30 p.m. for the convenience of all, and programmes last about one hour.

The Programme

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

An exceptionally talented cast has been listed for the principal roles in the latest Warner Bros. Production, "He Was Her Man," next attraction at the Queen's Theatre. James Cagney, recently seen in "A Midsummer Night's Dream" as "Bottom," has the leading masculine role, while Joan Blondell, of the "Traveling Saleslady" fame, plays opposite him in the feminine lead. Yet another member of the cast of the Shakespearean masterpiece "A Midsummer Night's Dream," Victor Jory, will be seen in a strong characterization of a simple Portuguese fisherman who is deeply infatuated with Miss Blondell, in the role of a woman of the streets. Frank Craven, the noted actor-writer-director has the role of a "stooge" while others in the cast include such well known players of both stage and screen as Harold Huber, Russell Hopton, Italo Haralde, Sarah Padden and James Eagles. The picture is a dramatic story of an utterly unscrupulous scoundrel whose one decent act is to go to his death without inflicting his enamoured, loving free to wed the man who has offered her real love. Lloyd Bacon directed the picture from the screen play by Tom Buckingham and Niven Busch, based on a story by Robert Lord.

"It's In The Air"
 Comedy, thrills and romance in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "It's In The Air," now showing at the King's Theatre, will cause the audience to thrill, chill and shiver with delight. Jack Benny, public hero of the air waves, is now definitely established as one of the screen's ace comedians. As the Broadway "chiseler" who loses his wife because of his shady dealings, but wins her love again and becomes a national hero by making a record-breaking stratosphere flight, Benny turned in a sterling performance. Ann, Merkel, as Benny's wife, shows her forte as a dramatic actress. Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton are superb in their respective roles of the "confidence man's" aide.

kick and the comical "G-Man." Mary Carlisle, as the flapper vixen who attempts to win Benny from his wife, Harvey Stephens and Grant Mitchell all turn in excellent performances. The fast-moving plot concerns the adventures of Benny, the "chiseler," and his assistant, Healy, who are fugitives from the law because they failed to make income tax returns, upon advice of a shyster lawyer. Pendleton, the "G-Man," is close upon their heels when they decide to go to a desert resort, where they pretend to be stratosphere flyers. An aeroplane manufacturer offers them a balloon, and a group of businessmen, vacationing at the resort, put up the money for the flight for the publicity attached to it. Benny and Healy are going to run away with the money at the last minute, but Benny meets his estranged wife, Una Merkel, at the resort and she promises to take him back if he'll go straight. He agrees, but Healy runs away with the money. Benny catches him and they go up in the balloon—and then the thrills and laughs come every second.

"Man On The Flying Trapeze"
 Above all else W. C. Fields, screen comic, has a unique style of delivery which has endeared him to millions. Fields, who is starred in Paramount's "Man On The Flying Trapeze," which opened yesterday at the Queen's Theatre to delighted audiences, declares he acquired his raspy voice as a youngster, and never has lost it. Few people know he started his career as a vocal comedian, turning to pantomime when he left for abroad. The Fields delivery is unique. The lines themselves, with the raspy Fields voice reciting them, gain a distinctive humour, that no other funny man on stage or screen can imitate or equal. Paramount put him in a picture called "International House." The public roared. He was given a film contract by Paramount and put upon his own, privileged to write his own bitlines and his own dialogue. In "The Man On The Flying Trapeze," Fields is seen as a down-trodden, clerk, brow-beaten in the office and hen-pecked at home. The film tells how this funny "poor-man" tries to sneak away from his office and his nagging wife and mother-in-law to attend a wrestling match.

MISS ELIZABETH OLSEN
LENGTHY MISSIONARY

A lifetime devoted to work in the mission field in the Far East ended with the death at the Matilda Hospital yesterday morning of Miss Elizabeth Olsen, aged 64 years, an American Methodist missionary. Miss Olsen, who is well-known in missionary activities in Canton and Singapore, died after an illness of several months. Since April she had been devotedly looked after by her sister, Miss Mary Olsen, of the American Methodist Mission, in Singapore. The deceased came to Penang in 1907, after several years' missionary work in San Francisco, and later joined her sister, Miss Mary Olsen, at the American Methodist Mission, Singapore. She remained at Singapore for seven years and then went home on furlough, returning to the Far East during the early part of the Great War. She carried on missionary work independently at Canton, where she undertook the care of orphan children. She was a quiet worker and no one knew how much she accomplished at Canton, as she was of an unassuming disposition and did not court publicity. She was very much liked by her fellow missionaries in Canton and Hongkong, and great sympathy is felt for her sister, who is now in Hongkong, and two other sisters and a brother in San Francisco.

The funeral took place yesterday at the Protestant cemetery, Happy Valley, the Rev. E. C. H. Tribbeck officiating at the Chapel of the Resurrection. The remains were then cremated at Sookunpo. The ashes of the deceased will be sent to San Francisco.

Among those present were her sister, Mary, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Reiton, Mr. and Mrs. Larsons, Mr. A. Grant, Miss Myers, and Mrs. E. L. Brondus and Miss S. Moritz. Wreaths were sent by her sister, Mary, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Brondus, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Grant, the Peniel Missionaries and Sophie Moritz.

FALSE CONFESSION?

THIRD DEGREE ALLEGED BY DEFENDANT

Allegations that he had been struck by a Chinese detective with a truncheon and forced to make a false confession, were made by Tsang Kan, alias Tsang Ping, aged 24, unemployed, when he was committed to stand trial at the next Criminal Sessions, by Mr. Q. A. A. Macdougall at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday.

Defendant was charged with, having, with others not in custody, committed an armed robbery at No. 12 Cowshed, Diamond Hill, Kowloon City, on December 15 last, and stealing jewellery and clothing to the total value of $80.60, belonging to Wong Yuk, alias Wong Po, a woman.

Inspector Chester-Woods appeared for the prosecution.

In describing the incident, Yip Shing, driver employed by the complainant, stated that he was carrying a kerosene lamp when he left the house and by its light he saw that there were three men and each were armed with a knife.

The robbers would not allow witnesses to see faces, but he saw that one of them wore a coat with stripes. He was the tallest and carried a folding knife with a blade about three inches long with a wooden handle.

Knives Described

The second man held a knife about nine inches long, and the blade was two inches long. The third man was armed with a folding knife which had more than one blade and a metal handle. The first man wore a felt hat, the third a cap and the second was bareheaded.

Chung Wah, detective, C649, deposed that about 10.45 a.m. on January 14 he was in the Bay View Police Station when he received certain information and went out with an informant to Electric Street where defendant was pointed out to him. Witness stopped defendant and after cautioning him told him that he was being arrested on suspicion of having been concerned in a robbery at Diamond Hill.

Inspector W. R. Chester-Woods stated that as the result of a report made at the Kowloon City Police Station at 3.25 a.m. on December 15 last, he went to No. 12 Cowshed, Diamond Hill. Witness entered a dwelling house about 25 yards away from the shed, and was shown into the main cubicle which showed signs of having been ransacked. A box and a cupboard had been opened. In the kitchen witness picked up a piece of cotton tape from the floor and the following morning when he made a second visit, he found a strip of thin wire on top of a wooden box containing rubbish had been taken back to the Kowloon City Police Station witness, with the assistance of a police interpreter, cautioned defendant and took from him a statement in question and answer form. At that time defendant was under arrest but witness had not made up his mind whether to charge him.

Defendant's Statement

In the course of his statement which was read out by Inspector Chester-Woods defendant said: "Fung Sang used to work for San Lee and he was paid off; I was also paid off later. I met him in the street and he asked me to go across the harbour to rob a cowshed. I told him that I dare not go. He told me that he would go first and would follow him and he would give me some wire. He said he would go into the house first and I was to follow him in. When I got in he told me to bind up the people. After we robbed we ran away. When we got to the hills, Fung Sang gave me the wire. Then Fung Sang and I went across the harbour by the Cha Kwo Ling ferry. When we arrived I invited him to a tenhouse but he refused. We then parted and I went alone to take ten. We are now unemployed and we have been looking for work. I was on the way to the Wan Ho Quarry when I was arrested."

Continuing his evidence witness stated that on or about that date there had been no report of any robberies. There had been no robberies in that area for at least eight months.

Asked whether he had any questions to ask defendant said: "This (the statement) was extracted from me forcibly; I was struck by a policeman with a truncheon."

Insp. Chester-Woods: No, he was not assaulted. On the contrary we gave him cakes and tea.

Defendant: This was in the cabin of the launch when I was being taken to the Kowloon City Police Station.

Insp. Chester-Woods: During the journey in the launch I was sitting just above the cabin and I heard defendant and the detectives talking. There was no sign of any violence.

Defendant: I was struck once. It is quite possible that this witness did not hear it.

The Magistrate: Did you make any complaint of it?

Defendant: No, I didn't.

"Answers Omitted"

Defendant further alleged that a number of answers made by him were omitted in the statement because they would not help the police case.

This allegation was denied by Insp. Chester-Woods, who further stated that the statement was taken from defendant about two minutes after his arrival at the Kowloon City Police Station. Defendant was in witness's sight all the time and did not have an opportunity to speak to any police officer at the Kowloon City Police Station.

Law Yung-shing, interpreter, gave corroborative evidence and stated that defendant, in answer to the charge made a statement saying: "I have already given you my statement. I did take part in the robbery."

Defendant said that he did not wish to make a statement or give evidence, and he was then committed to stand trial at the Criminal Sessions.

TALK ON GEORGE BORROW

ABLE ADDRESS BY PROF. SIMPSON

An interesting address on the life and literary career of George Borrow, the mid-Victorian author, was given by Professor K. K. Simpson at the monthly meeting of the English Association at the Helena May Institute yesterday. His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, was in the chair.

The address was listened to by a large gathering including the Hon. Sir Thomas Southern, Sir William Hornell, the Hon. Mr. M. K. Lo and Mrs. Lo, Mr. R. H. Kotewall, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. de Martin, Mr. Edgar Davidson, the Rev. F. G. T. Byrne, Mr. R. A. C. North, Mr. W. J. Carrie, and Mr. H. C. Macnamara.

In calling upon Professor Simpson to deliver his address, His Excellency thanked the Association for the honour it had done him by calling him to preside over the meeting. They always remain to listen to a man who knew what he was talking about! (Laughter).

Prof. Simpson

Professor Simpson said in part: My reason for choosing this minor mid-Victorian subject is that I believe it to be thoroughly typical. The last fifteen years of Great Britain has seen the revival of an ancient art and a long neglected outdoor pursuit. Those who revived it called it "hiking." For those of us who are far separated from the ideal hiking districts of Great Britain there always remains the vicarious enjoyment of vagrancy in the works of George Borrow.

If you tell me that Hongkong is not built for hiking, or that you are too much travelled to revel in travel, I can assure you that Borrow has still some claim to special local interest for people in Hongkong. His name once appeared in the advertised title of a book as co-author with one who later became Governor of this Colony, and he was one of the first Englishmen to display a keen and practical interest in the Chinese language.

Through his interest in languages, which he shared with his friend, Dr. Bowring, he expected to get an official appointment. It was particularly interesting to be sent to the consular service in Canton in 1847. Dr. Bowring was sent instead; and, after being moved to Hongkong became Governor of this Colony as Sir John Bowring in 1851. So that, although Hongkong is not one of the many distant places which Borrow claimed to have visited, he may certainly be said to have looked towards it. And we must surely feel we have some special interest in a great writer who in the thirties of the last century was engaged in the study of Chinese and in the forties to enter through Canton as an official in the Consular service.

The curiosity of his literary career lies in the failure of "Lavengro" and "The Rimmery Rye," after the sudden success of "The Bible in Spain." On one great occasion, two years after his big success, he was invited to write for the Quarterly, a review of Ford's famous "Handbook for Travellers in Spain." But he did it so crudely and carelessly that Lockhart had to return it unpublished. He was a literary success, but he cut himself off from the men who could give it to him. The growing literary men of his time, such as Carlyle, Ruskin, Matthew Arnold, Browning and Tennyson, meant nothing to him; and when he referred in his books to the great writers of the previous age, it was always in terms, well calculated to offend their admirers, who were the great reading public of his own age. The fact of the matter is that he was contemptuous of those who followed his own way. He preferred the company of tramps, who never read his books, to the company of writers who would sit in judgment on them.

Before passing from the biographical to the purely literary interest of George Borrow, there is one topic which lies between the two, and always makes discussion. That is Borrow's knowledge of languages and interest in philology. Borrow was fully aware how much or how little meaning can be attached to "knowing a language."

A Great Linguist

The important thing about his linguistic studies, is the literary use he made of them. In one way this was unfortunate. All his life he was enticed into giving to unwanted translation the time that could have been better spent in original composition. But in another way, his linguistic interests to great effect. It was part of the glamour which he threw over the recorded facts of his life.

Associated with this delightful interest in strange tongues, is his constant enthusiasm for etymology; for tracing words to their roots, and finding a common root in many languages. It is for the pleasures of imagination that we read Borrow. And the true critical enjoyment of his books depends on realising how a personality which was not particularly attractive in every-day life could be made entrancing when put in a book. His books were largely constructed from his letters and diaries. He had not the spontaneous literary power which made Charles Lamb as charming in correspondence as in publishing essays.

Borrow made wonderful literature out of commonplace experience. This he accomplished by throwing over the incidents of his life, a glamour of humour and of imagination. As for his imagination, it is a quality which pervades everything he wrote, and can make itself felt even when he writes the stiffest Johnsonese. It was something which his mind added to his experience.

Literary Arts

In addition to the two great gifts of humour and imagination, which

URBAN COUNCIL

FORMAL BUSINESS ONLY YESTERDAY

Formal business only was transacted at the meeting of the Urban Council yesterday afternoon.

A letter was laid on the table from Government relative to the appointment of Dr. Li Shu-fan and Mr. A. A. A. as additional members of the Council.

In addition to these two there were present Mr. W. J. Carrie, Chairman; Hon. Dr. A. R. Wellington, vice-Chairman; Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith, Hon. Mr. P. H. King, Mr. F. C. Hall, Dr. A. de Castro Basto, Mr. L. C. F. Bellamy, Dr. Chau Sek-nin and Mr. C. J. Roe, Secretary.

Applications for eating house licences at Nos. 57 to 59, Nathan Road, ground floor, and No. 80, Wing Lok Street, ground floor, were received; and it was decided to visit No. 14, Eastern Street, third floor, on Thursday at noon before coming to a decision on an application for a good factory licence there.

Monthly returns of a routine nature were submitted to the meeting.

defy all critical analysis, Borrow had the command of two subsidiary literary arts, which it is not unprofitable to investigate; the art of narrative and the art of dialogue. His narrative art was different from that to which his age was accustomed. It was not the trick of contriving a plot for a novel. Closely connected with this gift for narrative, but I think even more marvellous, is Borrow's genius for writing dialogue. Here he was unique, utterly different from any contemporary, and, until our own day, apparently without any successful imitator.

As for Borrow's genius in the writing of fascinating conversation, it is a remarkable thing, that a man who made his characters speak so well, and who professed to build his books on knave for getting into conversation with any man in any country, was not in everyday life a glib and genial conversationalist. We have already seen how inept he was with his fellow writers. But he has also left examples of this in his unrevised and unpublished diaries. On the occasion of his last tramp through Scotland, he met a man on the road who, to use his favourite expression, gave him the sole of the day, by saying, "It's a soft day." Borrow replied, "You should not say a soft day, but a wet day." (Applause).

The Discussion

Discussion then followed, and Mr. H. C. Macnamara said that, though he very much appreciated the lecture, he hoped that the Association would in the future also give addresses on living authors. "If one looked at the authors who had been discussed by the Association, one would tend to gather that there were no living English authors. Another point was that the Association had confined itself entirely to dead English authors to the exclusion of American or foreign ones. Referring to the lecture, Mr. Macnamara said he was interested in Borrow because he found in him two other authors whom the lecturer did not mention. It seemed to him that the three of them had something in common in that they chiefly wrote about themselves. The other two authors were Coleridge and Bolce. Professor W. Brown said that if the suggestion made by Mr. Macnamara about addresses on living authors were to be taken up by the Association, he would like to propose that a lecture should be given on Professor Starkey who is the professor of Spanish in the University of Dublin. Professor Starkey had written two books, one on "Raggle Taggle in Spain," and the other "Raggle Taggle in Spain." He expressed the hope that one day Professor Simpson or, perhaps, Mr. Macnamara would give an address on such an eminent author.

Governor's Criticism

In thanking Professor Simpson for his interesting address, His Excellency the Governor said he thought perhaps he should feel better about Borrow, but he couldn't. He was glad to know that his translations were lost. (Laughter). He was also glad that he had had no successful imitator and that his diaries remained unpublished (laughter).

"Perhaps," continued His Excellency, "of an being unjust to Borrow, but unfortunately in the days of my youth he was one of those authors whom I was told that I ought to read. My aunt had always tried to make me read 'Romany Rye,' and although I think I have read it, the climate of Malaya had helped me to cast it aside. It still remains upstairs and I had not read it I might be tempted, so interesting was the lecture, to spend this evening looking at it again. I think that what upsets me about Borrow is that he never seemed to get to reality. Continuing, His Excellency said that he felt that somewhat over-praise had been given to Borrow on the subject of his form of composition. They were informed that when they read a novel by Scott they were troubled by placing their minds back to what they had already gone through in the previous chapters. It seemed to him, however, that it was better to read all the chapters than only one!

His Excellency concluded by saying that his "valuable" criticisms came direct from his heart. (Loud laughter and applause). The Hon. Sir Thomas Southern then proposed a vote of thanks to His Excellency the Governor for having kindly consented to preside over the meeting. He expressed the hope that His Excellency would continue to do so during his term of office here.

His Excellency replied by saying that he would have much pleasure to preside over the meetings of the Association in the future if he were called upon to do so.

The meeting then closed, and it was announced that the Association would next meet on Tuesday, March 8 when Miss Curtis will speak on "Music in Words."

CHARGED WITH MURDER

SEQUEL TO KASSEL MYSTERY

WHITE-SLAVE RING

Paris, Feb. 4.
The man known as Kasel, who was detained by the police here at the request of the London authorities, has been charged by the examining Magistrate with the wilful murder of Max Kassel, known to the London underworld as "Max the Red" and whose body was discovered nine days ago in a lonely lane near St. Albans.

Susanne Belton, who was arrested at the same time, has been charged with complicity in the murder.—Reuter Special.

RING IN LONDON

London, Feb. 4.
Identification on January 24 of the gangster's victim, Max Kassel, a Polish Jew, has assisted in securing revelations concerning an enormous white slaving and alcoholic peddling ring in Great Britain, with ramifications in Europe, Africa and North and South America. Kassel is said to have been chief of a gang which specialised in bringing foreign women to Britain through a system of "marriages of convenience".

Once the girls were in the country, they were established in West End apartments. It is believed Kassel was slain because he encroached on a rival's territory or because he double-crossed some of his own men.

A woman led the police to Kassel's apartment, and documents found there revealed that at least thirty Londoners were engaged in the white slave traffic.

NO EXTRADITION

Meanwhile, officials are unable to secure the extradition of Charles Lacroix, from France, on a charge of murdering Kassel because the French Surete has proved that the man is not an American, but Roger Marcel Vernon, a Frenchman, who escaped from Devil's Island in 1927 and thereafter resided in London and Paris. He is at present held in Paris.—United Press.

REVOLT FEARED IN CHILE

MILITARY PUT ON WAR BASIS

PRECAUTIONS IN SANTIAGO

(By Telegraph. Copyright Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received, Feb. 5, 8 a.m.)
Santiago, Feb. 4.
The Chilean military has been put on a war basis due to the fear that the present railway strike may be accompanied by sabotage, organised by Communists, and that this may be the opening of a general revolution.

Colonel Manuel Campos has been named emergency head of the National Railway. He has sent an ultimatum to all men refusing to return to work, threatening them with court-martial.

Troops are operating the trains and the police are confined to their barracks.

General Juan Contreras has been appointed Military Governor of the Santiago area and his troops are doing the police work.

The Carabineros have closed the headquarters and all branches of the Chilean Workers' Federation.—United Press.

TRIAL BY PEERS

USEFULNESS NOW OUTLIVED

London, Feb. 4.
A motion proposed by Lord Sankey expressing the opinion that the present system of trial by Peers had outlived its usefulness was adopted by the House of Lords by 45 votes to 24.

During the debate, opponents of the motion demanded the retention of the old tradition, while supporters contended that the procedure was outmoded by the number of members who refrained from voting.

ASSURING BRITISH SECURITY

REVELATIONS IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

(By Telegraph. Copyright Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924. Received, Feb. 5, 8 a.m.)

London, Feb. 4.
Proposals for the reorganisation of Great Britain's armed forces would soon be made public, Mr. Stanley Baldwin announced to-day in the House of Commons. The plans of the Government entailed considerable expansion of the country's defence units, he declared, but the full details would shortly be disclosed in a White Paper.

After that the House would discuss the scheme, but he would not announce any date for the debate.

Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Minister, whose energy recently has been concentrated on the subject of the proposed oil embargo against Italy and the dangers involved in such a contingency, informed the House that experts were still studying the possibility of this form of sanctions.

He briefly mentioned the exchange of views between Great Britain, France, Greece, Turkey, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Albania and Spain, regarding mutual military support in the event of an attack.

These discussions "revealed a complete identity of views," the Foreign Minister disclosed.—United Press.

EARLY ANNOUNCEMENT

London, Feb. 4.
The Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, announced in the Commons at question-time that the Government's proposals regarding defence requirements would be made available at an early date in a White Paper, giving full details, which would be issued sufficiently in advance of the general discussion in the House.

Replying to Sir Austen Chamberlain, he said he did not think the debate would take place in the immediate future.—British Wireless.

LONDON PARLEYS

London, Feb. 4.
In the House of Commons to-day, the Parliamentary Secretary for the Admiralty briefly reviewed the work of the Naval Conference still in session here.

He said the conference was now beginning a long discussion on qualitative limitation of fleet strength and the Government wanted an agreement at the Conference before deciding whether other countries would be invited to participate, as Mr. A. V. Alexander, the former Labour Minister, had suggested.

Mr. C. R. Attlee, leader of the Opposition, inquired when the House would be informed regarding the Government's proposals for increased expenditure on armaments.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, replied that a white paper would be issued with respect to armament expenditures, to be followed by a full discussion. But he thought the debate would not be immediate.—Reuter.

COMING WEDDINGS

CINEMAS BECOME HOTELS WHEN JAPAN SEES SNOW

Tokyo, Feb. 5.

The heaviest blizzard of the past half-century swept across Central Japan at noon yesterday and continued throughout last night.

Ten inches of snow have fallen in many places. Electric trains and municipal tramways are out of commission. Motor cars have been snowed up in hundreds of instances and the roads are blocked in all directions. Travel is almost impossible.

In the capital the tramway service was still suspended at 10.30 a.m. to-day and taxis were so rare they were almost unobtainable. However, by 11 a.m. the electric train service was partially restored, but time-tables were entirely out of order. The trains arrived when they were able.

The weather was so severe last night that many theatres and cinemas were turned into hotels and the audiences stayed the whole night.—Reuter.

ETHIOPIAN CLAIMS

Addis Ababa, Feb. 4.

The Italian column which attacked the troops of Dajaz Bayaneu Moredo on the southern front, have been repulsed by the Ethiopians with heavy losses inflicted, according to a still unconfirmed report.

The Italians left 1,700 dead on the field, most of them men of the Black-shirt battalions.—Reuter.

MEETING CRISIS

Rome, Feb. 4.
For the first time since its enlargement in November last to include representatives of nearly every branch of national activity, the Supreme Council of National Defence met this afternoon.

The Fascist Dictator, Signor Benito Mussolini, is the President of the body, and its proceedings are guarded closely and kept most secret. The meetings of the Council are likely to continue for several days.

No communiques will be issued with respect to proceedings but it is supposed that the defensive organisation of the nation, against the extension of sanctions, and against any counter-attack, is being discussed from both civil and military sides.—Reuter Special.

FUEL CONTROL

Rome, Feb. 4.
A Royal Decree was issued to-day for the formation of a Technical Co-operative Committee to deal with the control of liquid fuels in Italy and to ascertain the necessary requirements of the country.

The Committee will also study the production of substitutes in the place of liquid fuel and oil.

FIRST COMMUNIQUE

Rome, Feb. 4.
A communique was issued at the conclusion of the Fascist Grand Council meeting at 12.30 a.m. to-day, following a three-hour session, declaring that the Council regards the recent military victories on the Eritrean and Somali fronts as determining factors in the Ethiopian situation.

The Council reaffirms its decision to reach the objective to which the military effort was initiated.

The Council also drew up a plan for the counter-measures, in the event of a stiffening of sanctions by the League of Nations. It adopted a motion for the direct control of foreign trade by the Finance Minister.—Reuter.

SOLDIER SENT TO PRISON

LENGTHY LIST OF COMPLAINTS

RESTITUTION ORDERED

How a Lance Corporal of the East Lancashire Regiment absented himself for a week, after which he was deprived of his stripes—which is the maximum penalty that can be imposed by the Commanding Officer—and again absented himself on the same day until he was found by military police three days later, was told before Mr. Balfour at the Central Magistracy this morning when John Mansfield, 23, appeared on remand.

The defendant pleaded guilty to the following charges:—Obtaining, under false pretences, goods to the value of £23.50, from Messrs. Whiteway, Laidlaw and Company Ltd.

Attempting to obtain goods to the value of £74.50 from Messrs. Lane Crawford, by falsely pretending that his name was J. White, an employee of the Supreme Court, Hongkong, and was interested in the Boy Scout movement.

Obtaining board and lodging to the extent of £16 from the Metropole Hotel by falsely pretending his name was J. White, an employee of the Supreme Court and that his parents lived at 16, Ventnor Road.

IN SPITE OF CRITICISM

Washington, February 4.
Representative James P. Buchanan, Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives, revealed himself as being dubious regarding the success of the United States Silver Purchase programme, during the hearing of the Treasury's Appropriation Bill, published to-day.

The Democratic Representative of Texas said: "I can see where purchases made until the proper ratio between gold and silver is reached would be a very fine thing, but it lays a foundation which would be successful for the adoption of an internationally double standard for gold and silver."

"But," he said, "not having succeeded in having such a foundation adopted amongst commercial nations, I cannot see what good it does except to boost the domestic silver price and stimulate the production of silver in a few States."

Mr. Daniel W. Bell, Acting Director of the Budget and Commissioner of Accounts and Deposits, had earlier revealed that the silver purchase programme was making little headway.

In response to Representative Buchanan's request for an estimate of the amount of money the Treasury still must spend on silver purchases before the stocks reach the required one-fourth of the monetary value of the gold stocks, Mr. Bell said:—

"That is very difficult to answer, because as we buy silver, gold also increases, so we are making little progress; and with gold coming in so fast, so far as the proportion between silver and gold is concerned, we are unable to make much headway."

The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, informed Representative Buchanan that continued silver purchases would be "absolutely mandatory" until the ratio of silver to gold, that was fixed by law, is reached.—United Press.

DRIZZLE OR MIST

EIGHT DIE OF COLD AS EASTERN U.S. FREEZES

New York, Feb. 4.

There have been many accidents in the eastern United States as a result of severe frosts following a drizzle of rain. Streets in scores of cities were ice-coated and were rendered not only unsafe for pedestrians and motor vehicles, but almost impassable.

Traffic has been held up generally. Farmers were obliged to deliver their milk and dairy produce by sledge in many places.

Meanwhile, there is still heavy snow in places. Six trains are stuck deep in snow-drifts in Iowa.

In Illinois the terrible cold snap continues. There have been eight deaths in that state, Illinois and Indiana.

There is a temperature of 38 degrees below zero at Bemidje, Minnesota, which is the coldest spot in the United States at the moment. However, people in that state are usually prepared for severe cold and deaths are unusual.—Reuter.

MURDERER'S SURRENDER

Davos, Feb. 4.

A twenty-six year-old Jugo-Slav subject, of Jewish blood, a medical student named David Frankfurter, to-day shot to death the chief, Nazi agent in Switzerland.

Frankfurter called on the house of the agent, a man named Gustloff, and as soon as the victim came to the door the young assassin fired five times from close range. Gustloff was killed instantaneously.

Frankfurter left the house at once and surrendered to the police quietly. He said he was not a Communist. He had shot Gustloff deliberately, however, because he hated the German regime.—Reuter.

CONDOLENCES

Berlin, Feb. 5.

Pekin, Illinois, Feb. 4.
Unions declared a general strike here to-day in sympathy with distillery workers, who are "out" for more wages.

Some 4,000 men, barbers, bakers and factory workers are idle.

Troops are being held in readiness in near-by towns but martial law won't be declared unless there is violence. At present 600 strikers are keeping 90 strike-breakers prisoners inside the American Distilling Company plant.—United Press.

SILVER FUTURE TRADING

TO BE RESUMED IN LONDON TO-DAY

New York, Feb. 4.

Messrs. Handy and Harmon's silver quotation remained unchanged at 44 cents per ounce here to-day.

London "spot" silver declined 1/10 pence to 19½ pence per ounce.

London bullion brokers have announced that they will resume dealings in forward silver on Wednesday, February 5. This is interpreted as a definite indication that the spot market is stabilised due to the fact that on December 9, 1935, brokers announced that forward trading would be suspended until the spot position had been cleared up.—United Press.

BRITISH INTERESTS IN CHINA

NOT AFFECTED BY AUTONOMY MOVE

SHANGHAI SITUATION

London, Feb. 4.

Replying to questions in the House of Commons to-day regarding the situation in China, Mr. Anthony Eden, the Foreign Secretary, briefly recalled the establishment of the Hopel-Charter Political Council and the administration of the demilitarised zone in north-east Hopei by the autonomous Council.

The Minister added that so far as he was aware British interests in North China had not been materially affected.

Meanwhile, he said, it had been reported that the Japanese Government had accepted the Chinese Government's invitation to discuss outstanding points of political and economic difference. There was good reason to hope an effort would be made to regularise the position through diplomatic channels.

SHANGHAI SITUATION

Mr. A. E. L. Chorlton, (U), asked whether there had been any report on the relations existing between the Shanghai Japanese and the Shanghai Municipal Council.

Mr. Eden informed the House that several reports had been received on current events, showing there was a demand in certain Japanese quarters in Shanghai for increased representation on the Municipal Council.

Official relations appeared quite normal, he added.—Reuter.

MESSAGE TO PARLIAMENT

London, Feb. 4.
It was officially revealed to-day that when King Edward received a deputation of members of the House of Commons at Buckingham Palace on January 27, bringing an address of condolence, His Majesty, after the presentation of a formal reply, in the course of which he said:—

"May I say that the formality of this occasion is somewhat lessened by the presence of so many familiar faces? You have all served my father in different Governments during his great reign. The sight of old friends bringing me this address gives me encouragement and confidence for the future."—Reuter Special.

KING'S FIRST OBJECT

London, Feb. 4.
When the House of Commons convened to-day, His Majesty the King sent a message, in which he stated:—"I have received with true satisfaction the loyal and affectionate address from the House of Commons concerning the late King, which I have sustained and concerning my succession to the Throne."

"I thank you for your expression of loyal attachment to my person. You may be assured that the first object of my life will be to maintain the liberties of my people and to promote the welfare of all classes. I pray that by the blessing of Almighty God I may justify your trust through-out my reign."—United Press.

Meat Shortage In London

12,000 STRIKERS RESPONSIBLE

London, Feb. 4.
London is now faced with a meat shortage as a result of the continuation of the Smithfield market strike, which was to-day extended to cold storage workers, thus bringing the number of strikers up to 12,000.

Supplies in some shops were to-day practically exhausted, and tomorrow they will be empty unless the emergency arrangements which are being prepared are effective. The strikers held another meeting this afternoon after which an official stated that the position was unaltered.—Reuter's Bulletin Service.

ATLANTIC AIR RIVALRY BECOMES MORE INTENSE

TELL U. S.
ABOUT H. K.

BRITISH PLANS TO BE CHALLENGED

IT is becoming increasingly clear that Great Britain is not to be allowed to establish a commanding position on the Atlantic airways without a struggle.

Other nations are beginning to realise that the North Atlantic line is likely to prove the most remunerative of all the world's air lines, and they are making preparations so that they shall be in a position to compete with Britain.

An agreement has been reached between representatives of Imperial Airways and Pan-American Airways for co-operation in the running of an Atlantic air line by way of the Azores and Bermuda; but there is a body of opinion in America that believes that American should free herself from all commitments and run her own air lines independently.

The recent success of the new Pan-American flying boat, the China Clipper, on the Pacific crossing has encouraged this opinion, and it is held that the American lines should retain complete freedom of action, so as to be able eventually to establish all-American air lines going right round the world.

Fresh Pioneer
Air France is also interested in the Atlantic route. This company pioneered the Southern Atlantic air route, and its mail carriers have flown across the ocean 55 times. The service is weekly in both directions. One of the Air France seaplanes has done 23 crossings.

It now appears that Air France is also interested in the North Atlantic route, and that it may use the Lieutenant de Vaisseau Paris, the 37-ton flying boat, for experimental flights during 1936.

Fokker is also known to be considering the construction of Transatlantic flying boats, and Germany hopes to establish more frequent services with airships. Britain's second string on the Atlantic route, should any hitch occur in the line planned with the co-operation of Pan-American Airways, is provided by the Mayo composite aircraft. This might make possible the establishment of regular mail, and eventually passenger services across the direct route between Ireland and Newfoundland.

Strong westerly winds prevail upon this route, and increase the air mileage by about 30 per cent. But the composite aircraft, if it performs according to the design calculations, should have an ample range margin to meet these conditions.

The extreme northern route by Greenland, although it was used by Balbo when he led the large formations of Italian seaplanes across, is not regarded with favour for the running of an air line owing to the difficult weather conditions.

They Interrupted Hitler Broadcast

Berlin, Jan. 15.
Charged with cutting a cable and thus interrupting a broadcast speech by Hitler, six Communists have been arrested by the Wurttemberg police.
The incident occurred when Hitler was speaking in the Stuttgart Town Hall.
The originator of the plan is stated to have been 23-year-old Kurt Hager, the youngest of the arrested men.

PRECIOUS RELIC
SLOWLY FADING

A PHOTOGRAPH so precious that it has been on view for only two minutes during the past year was shown for a dozen seconds during the first of the annual Christmas lectures for children at the Royal Institution recently.

It is the earliest-existing photograph on paper, and it was taken in August, 1835, by Fox Talbot, of Lacock Abbey, Wilts. Only two inches square, it represents one of the Abbey windows, and every pane is perfectly distinct.

Body Buried On Lonely Sandbank

Townsville, Jan. 20.
WHEN Jimmy Dodd, a Torres Strait aboriginal, died aboard the lugger Neator, the captain of which is a Japanese, he was given a Japanese burial and so that he would not want on the last long journey food, water and tobacco were placed on his grave according to the custom of the Orient.

The strange story of the burial was told by Jimmy Lifu, aboriginal diver for beche de mer and trochus shell, when the Coronet inquired into Jimmy Dodd's death at sea. Lifu said that the lugger was fishing in Barrier Reef waters, when Jimmy Dodd died after a fortnight's illness, and the body was buried on a lonely sandbank in the Pacific north of Cairns.

The Japanese captain dressed the body in a cotton singlet, silk shirt and black trousers and wrapped it in a flour-sprinkled blanket. After another liberal covering of flour, it was encased in canvas and was buried. The Japanese made a wooden cross on which Lifu painted the name, "Jimmy Dodd," and then, to ensure that the aboriginal would not want on his long journey to join his ancestors, the captain placed a tin cup, a plate, two sticks of tobacco, three pieces of damper, cooked meat and a bottle of water on the grave.

But it is slowly fading away, and unless the utmost precautions are taken the picture will soon disappear entirely.

Research Wizard

The Christmas lectures this year are on photography, and are being given by the "Kodak Wizard," Dr. C. E. K. Mees, director of research of Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, U.S.A.

Dr. Mees probably knows more about the photographic process than any living man. He showed the children another rare photograph—the first American daguerrotype, for which a Miss Dorothy Draper sat for five minutes in blazing sunshine with her head in a tight wooden clamp and her face completely white-washed.

"They were victims, not subjects, in those days," said Dr. Mees.

Picture Of Audience

Dr. Mees is a British subject, though he has directed work for the Eastman Company since 1912. He was born in Wellington, 53 years ago, and his wife is a Purley woman.

In 1906 he made the first pan-chromatic plates. At present he is perfecting amateur colour films for 16mm. motion picture work.

KING EDWARD CUTS DOWN ON "FAGS"

London, Jan. 26. THE new King of England on the side of forty where life is supposed to be just beginning, is cutting down on cigarettes.

Just as he started reducing his daily wine consumption a few years ago King Edward is smoking cigarettes that are similar in looks to the American "cubeb" although they haven't undergone any de-nicotinizing process.

His cigarettes, made exclusively for him but without any cross or other marks of royal distinction which might make them prize trophies for the hero-worshippers, contain only half the usual amount of tobacco. The rest of the cylinder is a cardboard tube.

The new type of cigarettes is actually a compromise on the part of the King with his will-power, some of his friends say. For two or three years he has wanted to reduce his cigarette consumption—not because it appeared to be injuring his health but because he thought it would be rather a "good idea."

Plays Patience Often in the privacy of his study when he felt the urge for a cigarette he would steel himself against it, obtain a pack of playing cards and deal a game of "patience" which is similar to the American game called "solitaire." But that was too much trouble so he decided on the half-filled cigarettes. Now he smokes just as many cigarettes but less tobacco.

Cigarette smoking in England is almost twice as expensive as the habit is in the United States and one frequently hears men and women resolving to swear off entirely or budget themselves, package of standard brand cigarettes here costs a shilling—25 cents—as compared with 15 cents in the United States.

Pipe Smokers Pipe-smoking remains a national institution of Great Britain with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin the most famous pipe-smoker of all.

He rarely is photographed without his pipe as he enters or leaves No. 10 Downing Street and his briar—although not under-slung as characteristic on this side of the Atlantic as that of General Charles G. Dawes or the thin black cigar of the late "Uncle Joe" Cannon.

A smouldering cigarette is as much a part of the personality of Premier Laval of France as his white necktie. Hitler doesn't smoke, nor does Gandhi, the little brown man of India. But Mussolini does, although—like Calvin Coolidge, the photographers never catch him at it.

Cigar Smokers Lord Londale is regarded as the best-known cigar-smoker in Great Britain (medium grade cigars cost nearly 25 cents here) and it often has been reported that he smokes only an inch or so of his customary seven-inch Havanas and then lights a fresh one. His friends insist, however, that he is just as liable to make his cigar down a short butt.

Some inveterate cigar-smokers are very fussy. They are careful to pinch the end of a new cigar delicately to break the leaf, contenting that to cut or pierce the tending that to cut or pierce the end is a barbarism. But not Lord Londale. He hews a big wedge out of the cigar and with a formidable pocket knife which he carries on the end of a silver vest chain.

There are supposed to be few men who can be either smokers or non-smokers at will but Sir Malcolm Campbell, the speed driver, is one of them. Another is C. B. Cochran, producer of England's biggest musical shows.

3,000,000 BOTTLES OF WINE LEAVING ADELPHI ARCHES

Three million bottles of wine—half the entire stock housed in the Adelphi Arches—are being moved.

After March 25 housebreakers will start destroying Adelphi-terrace to make way for flats. The work of demolition and construction will take three years.

Two new streets will be built, one from the Thames Embankment to the Strand, the other parallel to Adelphi-terrace as it now stands.

For some time about 50 workmen have been carting away 50 large van-loads of bottles a day. A representative of a firm of wine wholesalers said:

"We are sorry to see the last of the Arches. We have been on

He Likes Hotel

Even though Robert C. Myers, former trusted clerk, disappeared from the Hotel De Anna, San Jose, Calif., the hotel hasn't seen the last of him. Since his disappearance last August, he has returned to the hotel twice, police say, and each time held up the night crew and robbed the cash register.

Girl, Asleep 3 Years, May Awaken Soon

Beautiful Patricia Maguire, attacked by the dread Encephalitis germ and held in a deep sleep for more than three years, may yet awake to the world she left early in 1932.

Successful experiments in propagation of the sleeping sickness virus have been reported by two bacteriologists of the University of Rochester school of medicine and dentistry and physicians believe their work may eventually lead to the reawakening of the girl known as "The sleeping beauty."

The experiments are described by Dr. George Packer and Dr. James T. Syverston in Science, Medical publication. In 18 months, Dr. Berry reported, they have grown in living cells the virus of human Encephalitis, termed the St. Louis type, "daily strain." For the first time, they said, the germ was developed outside the human body.

Described as merely a "first step" the experiments were conducted by obtaining virus from human patients and transferring it into tissue culture made with the tissue of mice.

Now Hope For Mother

Meanwhile, at her home in suburban Oak Park, her mother continued her care for Patricia with renewed hope.

"She is still the same beautiful girl she was before she became ill," her mother said. "We have worked over her so that we know her muscles are still supple and firm. She will be strong when she awakes."

Some improvement in her daughter's condition has been noted by the mother. Occasionally she seems to stir from her lethargy and is able to answer simple questions in arithmetic by raising her fingers. She does not speak.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, was among those who held out hope for Patricia's eventual recovery. He said:

"Miss Maguire's condition remains the same—sleeping, barely moving except to eat and breathe. No prevention or cure for encephalitis has yet been found. I hope this new work may clear the road for such a discovery."

NINE HAVE ALREADY MADE ATTEMPT

The names of the 12 men who, with Mr. Hugh Rutledge, as their leader, will make the fifth attempt to reach the summit of Mount Everest early next year have now been divulged.

Mr. Rutledge explains below that this party is the strongest that could be got together for the purpose. Of the twelve:

Nine have already been to Mount Everest; Ten are known to be capable of climbing to at least 23,000 ft; and Eight are expected to be capable of going very high.

The party has been limited to 12 to reduce the difficulties of portage on the glaciers and to simplify the problems of control.

The members will be: Hugh Rutledge, leader (as in 1933); F. S. Smythe, who will be making his fourth expedition to the Himalayas.

E. E. Shipton, a member of the 1933 Expedition and famous for his successful exploration last year, when he and Mr. Tilman were the first to penetrate the great glacier basin of Nanda Devi. Like Mr. Smythe, he will be on his fourth Himalayan expedition, and is probably the best acclimatised man in the party.

P. Wyn Harris, Kenya Civil Service. He has a great climbing record and went to about 28,000 feet in 1933.

E. G. H. Kempson, a master at Marlborough College. He has had long experience of both summer and winter mountaineering in the Alps and was with Mr. Shipton last year in the Everest region.

Dr. C. B. Warren, formerly of St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Another mountaineer of great experience, who was with Mr. Shipton last year.

F. H. L. Wigman, medical student, St. Thomas's Hospital. A member of Mr. Shipton's party last year, and has a long record in the Alps.

Lieut. J. M. L. Gavin, Royal Engineers. Has never been to the Himalayas, but did extremely well in Mr. Smythe's party in the Alps last year. His medical report was so good that there is every hope that he will do well on the mountain.

Lieut. P. R. Oliver, South Waziristan Scouts. First made a name by taking a small expedition of his own to the Himalayas in 1933, when he made the second ascent of Trisul, 23,406 feet. Has also considerable experience in the Alps and was with Mr. Smythe last year.

Major C. J. Morris, late 2/3rd Gurkha Rifles. Assistant transport officer on the Mount Everest Expedition of 1922, and will be chief transport officer next year. He knows the ropes, speaks Nepali perfectly and Tibetan well, and will devote himself exclusively to transport work.

Dr. Noel Humphreys, who has climbed in Switzerland and East Africa, and recently returned after leading an expedition to Ellesmere Land. A man of proved endurance with exceptional experience of medical work in out-of-the-way parts of the world.

Lieut. W. R. Smith-Windham, Royal Corps of Signals. One of the two wireless officers who accompanied the 1933 expedition. Though not normally a mountaineer, he reached Camp IV on that occasion. He will be in sole charge of wireless communications.

Qualities Required

This is the fifth expedition to go out, and with each successive effort the difficulty of the selection of personnel has perhaps been more plainly realised. The qualities necessary to enable a man to do well on Mount Everest—mountaineering experience and ability, endurance, capacity to acclimatise, equanimity and so on—are obvious essentials; but there is no complete test known to science whereby the possession of all these faculties by an individual can be thoroughly tested beforehand.

The problem of very high altitude mountaineering is so different from those which arise in expeditions to lesser ranges and to the Polar regions that it requires a special kind of solution.

It will readily be understood that practical experience on the spot provides a better test than theory. For this reason the Mount Everest Committee sent out last year a small preliminary expedition under the leadership of Mr. E. E. Shipton, whose task was to try out the mountaineering abilities, and especially the acclimatising powers, of five men, all

MARRIAGES BOOMED

SEARCHLIGHTS are turned on the life of London's millions and the way in which her vast sums of public money are spent in an interesting report issued by the London County Council.

The report tells that the county's population is falling. The estimated 1934 population was 4,230,200, a decline of 44,400 on the 1931 census figures, a drop being shown each year.

Where do the "excess" Londoners go when they quit the county? They migrate into extra-London, which now has almost as many inhabitants as the county itself. During 1934 there were 58,853 live births in the county, which, while a slight increase on 1933, was much below the figure for any year extending back to 1924, when the number was 85,147.

Marriages boomed, however. There were 43,165 in 1934, the largest number for 10 years.

Despite the falling population, the public services have increased. The value of the property trebled between 1871 and 1935, and the expenditure of London local authorities has trebled only since the beginning of the century.

The 1935 assessable values on which the precepts of the central authorities are based total £61,330,832, which represents £14 10s. per head of the population. A penny rate produces £255,645. For the additional money they contribute Londoners have received municipal hospitals, where one of

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

MARKET UPWARD YESTERDAY

New York, Feb. 4.
Swan, Culbertson and Fritz Dow Jones Summary of yesterday's market: Railroad, liquor and rubber securities as well as specialties today advanced substantially. Railroad issues reached the highest level since 1924 on expectation that carloadings will be the best for the year. The Dow Jones industrial average is the highest since 1931, due to the advance in steel issues on earnings' outlook. Electric equipment gained, offsetting the decline in automobile issues when the General Motor Company failed to declare an extra dividend. Utility stocks sagged on traders taking their profits.

Stocks on the Curb Exchange were active and higher. The market for bonds was strong.
Swan, Culbertson and Fritz Wall Street Journal Comment:—"It is predicted that automobile production during February will be slightly below that of January. Technicians are perplexed regarding the continued price rise. Bankers expect that the export movement of Gold will be small and short-lived. Brokers say that there is little speculation in high-priced stocks. It is likely that rubber prices will be stabilized since tyre companies are exhausted of cheap inventories. Cinema earnings continue satisfactory. Professional traders are growing more bullish."

C. & P. New York office cables: Stocks A firm tone has been maintained, with railroad, oil and equipment securities prominent. The following company earnings are for the year 1935: Du Pont $5.04 against $3.60 the previous year; The Pacific Light Company $1.55 against $2.72 the previous year; The General Signal $2.18, against a loss of $342,150 the previous year. Sears Roebuck's sales were up 10.1 per cent in January. Business failures during the past week amounted to 220, compared with 222 failures the previous week. Demand deposits totalled $14,017,000,000 against $13,836,000,000 the previous week.

Cotton: The President's proposal to repeal the Bankhead Cotton Act is probably to liberate a considerable amount of quota cotton. This action indicates the scarcity of supplies and the weak control policies. The Smith plan for gradual liquidation of loan and pool holdings is expected to ease the tight "quota" situation.
Wheat: Excellent winter crop conditions and the surplus of Canadian wheat are dominant factors.
Rubber: Some speculative liquidation was in evidence and trade buying was less aggressive. The primary markets were firm.

CANTON-HANKOW LINE

COMPLETION IN JULY THIS YEAR OF IMPORTANT SOUTH CHINA ARTERY

ADDRESS BY CAPT. R. D. WALKER

The last section of the Canton-Hankow railway will almost certainly be finished by July this year, according to Capt. R. D. Walker, Manager of the Kowloon Canton Railway, who yesterday addressed the Hongkong Rotary Club on this subject.

When 94 more miles of track are laid, there will be completed a steel route which will carry traffic between the two cities in 40 hours. The cost of this 681 miles is estimated at $175,000,000 but the result will be the formation of the second most important traffic artery in China.

The President of the Club, Professor L. Forster, was in the chair, and in response to his request the members stood a minute in silence in tribute to the memory of King George V.

Professor Forster said:—The members of our club have been suspended for the past fortnight as a mark of respect to our late King.

I do not propose to attempt to add anything to that which has been so eloquently expressed by others. I am especially struck by the splendid tribute which was rendered by Mr. Stanley Baldwin, who spoke from the fulness of his personal knowledge as King George and from which he was able to say in all sincerity how deeply to the King's life had been devoted to public duty could not have a finer example before it. King George in his own life gave full expression to the best ideals for which history stands and it is therefore especially fitting that we should honour his memory.

These present then stood in silence for a minute.

Capt. Walker who illustrated his talk with a map, said: Mr. President, gentlemen.—Immediately after my return from a tour of inspection of the Canton-Hankow Railway made two months ago I was asked by Professor Forster to give a Rotary talk on that Railway. At the time I was not at all sure why he wished me to give this talk, but the mystery was explained when I received a letter from him stating that he wished to visit Hankow with 50 or 60 others next Easter. Naturally he wanted first-hand information.

An after-lunch talk on an uncompleted Railway always presents certain difficulties. The rules of brevity demand ruthless pruning. One does not know what to leave out and what to include, but I trust you will bear with me. An attempt will be made to trace the history of the line and to present certain features of the construction and its possibilities.

Unification Factor

The Canton-Hankow Railway which is still in course of construction and is estimated to cost $175,000,000 Chinese currency, is 681 miles long and runs almost due north through the provinces of Kwangtung, Hunan and Hupeh. It consists of three sections, each under a separate Administration. The southern section, extending from Wuchang to Lok Chong, a distance of 169 miles, and includes the 30 miles branch line from Canton to Sam Shui. The northern section comprises 260 miles of main line from Wuchang to Chuchow, and the 55 miles coal carrying branch line from Chuchow to Pinghsiang. The middle section, which is the most important, extends from Lok Chong to Chuchow, a distance of 252 miles.

The Canton-Hankow Line is regarded by the Ministry of Railways as one of the two most important trunk lines in China, the other being the Lung-Hai Railway which runs almost due west from Hankow to a modernised port on the east coast, to Sian, the ancient capital of the empire and to-day the capital of the province of Shensi. The importance to China of the former line cannot be overestimated; its economic value is immense, and its completion will forge a very important link in her unification. Connection with the Peking-Hankow Railway, which is at present the most important trunk line traversing China, will be effected by means of a train ferry over the Yangtze River. This river is 4,250 feet wide at its narrowest point near Hankow or about four-fifths the distance between the two Star Ferry piers.

Many Obstacles

The history of the Canton-Hankow Railway has been one long chapter of postponement caused by financial and political struggling. The construction of a trunk line connecting Hankow, or rather Wuchang, immediately opposite Hankow, on the south bank of the Yangtze, with Canton, was first advocated by Sir Macdonald Stephenson some seventy years ago. In every subsequent scheme for a comprehensive system of railways in China, such a line has occupied a prominent position.

In the year 1908 a concession to construct the line was granted to the American-China Development Company. About this time the Spanish-American War broke out and the American Company did nothing to put the work in hand until peace was declared in the following autumn. A survey party headed by Mr. William Barclay Parsons was then sent to China. The survey party found that the original estimated cost of $4,000,000, or a little over $5,000,000 per mile, had been under-estimated to the extent of nearly 100 per cent. The Development Company, therefore, found it necessary to secure a modification of certain terms in the contract.

A supplementary agreement was reached early in 1910 and ratified by the Chinese Government. A restriction on assignment was embodied in this Agreement by the Viceroy who wished to impose a check on Franco-Belgian aims. French and Belgian interests had been strenuous of completing all engineering works at approximately the same time. It is anticipated that the whole line will be completed in July, 1936, and that after completion construction trains will continue to run for a few months in the dual capacity of serving both engineering and traffic operations. This is the method which has been adopted throughout the whole of construction and it has proved highly successful. Trains are not booked but run at times to suit the work. The 32-mile section between Lok Chong and Ping Shek, which was opened to this sort of operation in September last year, is now earning about $500 per day.

The whole of the construction work has been performed by an all-Chinese staff and they are particularly proud of this. I must say that they have every reason to be pleased, as the work is particularly well organised and executed.

Narrow Flood Margin

The section from Lok Chong to Chenchow over the Provincial divide is the most difficult of the whole system, involving as it does heavy rock cutting, tunnels, gorges, and the construction of high bridges and retaining walls. The original location of this section as planned by the American Engineers of the old Yueh Han Railway called for 65 tunnels. The new location, based on the studies of Messrs. Lee and P. S. Lin, now both District Engineers in Charge of the Kwangtung section of the line on the Kwangtung side along the east bank of the upper course of the North River. This has reduced the number of tunnels to 14 at the expense of an increase in the protective work level. The scenery from Lok Chong to Ping Shek (a distance of 32 miles) where the river passes through gorges is extremely beautiful.

The line runs through good quality dark coloured limestone and iron, and I fear that there may be considerable dislocation to traffic in times of heavy rainfall due to the certainty of slips in the shale banks and cuttings. The formation level has been placed 9 feet above maximum known river flood level. This is rather a small safety margin and there is a probability that in years to come the line may be damaged considerably by inundation, necessitating very heavy repair work. The location over the divide has enabled a satisfactory maximum grade of 1 in 100 without curve compensation to be obtained. This occurs for a length of 13 miles on both sides of the summit which rises to a height of about 1,101 feet above sea level.

Efficient Organisation

The Construction Administration with headquarters at Hengchow (mileage 338) is under the direction of a Director and Engineer-in-Chief who is assisted by a General Secretary and a Chief Accountant. Transport offices are established in Canton and Wuchang and three store depots are maintained at Lok Chong, Hengchow and Chuchow. The line is divided into 6 main districts, each with a District Engineer and three to four Section Engineers. Each District is provided with a Doctor and a Police Officer with armed forces.

The work is carried out on the Departmental system with contractors on piece-work rates. Local contractors and labourers perform most of the earthwork, but the more involved work is carried out by northerners and workmen from Shanghai.

A magazine is published monthly and distributed free to the staff. By this means all are kept informed of the progress and other relevant details connected with the work. The District Engineers informed me that the competitive spirit developed by this magazine has resulted in increased output and economy.

Transport of Materials

The work involved in organising the transportation of materials has been no mean task. The divide forms the watershed of the two main rivers, the Siang and the North, which flow north and south respectively. Materials transported by river must, therefore, move against the stream. Above Lok Chong the North River flows through a series of gorges between mountain ranges and there are only broken paths on the steep banks. The river is very shallow in winter and no less than 18 rapids occur in a distance of 25 miles. On the north side of the divide, the mountain ranges are steep and any water courses are of an inferior nature. Less than one-third of the material is landed in Canton and transported by rail to Lok Chong, the southern base. The rest is landed in Wuchang and sent by the Yangtze to Chuchow, the northern base. Owing to the fact that the two terminal sections of the railway are short of rolling stock, work has been impeded. All material from Chuchow to Hengchow, the central base, is transported by junk up the Siang River.

There is plenty of good limestone above Lok Chong and Ping Shek, but gravel ballast has to be used at present in the vicinity of Hengchow.

Importance of Hengchow

There is a good highway paralleling the railway from Hengchow to Chenchow and continuing to Ping Shek. Eight Chevrolet 3-ton trucks are maintained and operated by the Construction Administration along this highway for the transportation of cement and other urgently needed materials. As the Yangtze is very expensive for bulky and heavy material, small junks are used up the Lok River to as far as Chenchow. These junks take under most favourable conditions at least 20 days to arrive from Hengchow. At one time the Construction Administration owned over 300 of these junks.

Ample land provision has been made at Stations for future development. Hengchow Station and yard as well as its important position, half way between the terminal stations, has been designed on imposing lines. This has presented no difficulty as the city lies on the other side of the river. The station building, which at one time 100,000 men were employed in a reinforced concrete structure of 108 feet in length by 67 feet in width. There are 16 staff bungalows at present occupied by the senior construction staff which are intended to house the future operating staff. These bungalows have been laid out in "model village" plan and have modern sanitation. Fire-places are provided in each room. The whole station is lit with electric light from plant owned by the Railway. The high type platform is 300 metres long and there are to be Locomotive and Carriage sheds and the necessary workshops.

A nursery for trees is maintained near Hengchow. There will be half a million trees in this nursery at the end of the year and three quarters of a million at the end of the next year. From this nursery trees are being obtained to plant along the railway at the rate of approximately 6,000 per mile. Trees are also being planted which it is hoped will be available for the production of sleepers in 25 years.

British Orders

The rolling stock ordered in London for the completion of the Canton-Hankow Railway comprises 28 Locomotives, 160 Covered Wagons, 176 High-side Wagons, 90 Flat Wagons of 40 tons capacity, and 50 Carriages. Lines of communication which will be complete against the railway are of order of importance. Firstly, the Siang River which runs through the Tung Lake and joins the Yangtze River between Hanyang and Wuchang; secondly, the North River which joins the West River at Samshui; and thirdly, the metalled highways which run from Ping Shek to the east side of the Siang River at Hengchow and from the west side of Siang River at Hengchow to Changsha.

The Siang River, although shallow in winter (least depth of navigable channel in the Lake area is 4' 7"), allows the passage of junks during these months and transshipment takes place from these junks to river steamers and vice-versa at Hankow. During the summer, river steamers can proceed to Changsha and tugs and lighters, which ordinarily carry on the trade between Hankow and Changsha, are able to proceed as far south as Hengchow.

The North River is shallow in winter. Navigation of small junks is always difficult. Above Lok Chong there are many rapids.

Canton to Hankow

The highways are reasonably good with the exception of one stretch which starts at Ping Shek and runs for six miles to Siao Tung on the Kwangtung-Hunan border. The road proceeds northwards for about 134 miles to Hengchow East. There is only one private car on the road belonging to Mr. H. H. Ling, the Director and Engineer-in-Chief of Construction. The highways are stone macadamised and are built and maintained by the Provincial Governments. The buses are all run by Government, and passengers have to pay the high rate of 5 cents per mile. Passengers are all of one class, and they run to a time schedule and do not pick up passengers except at these stations. There is no connection between this highway and the one running between Hengchow West and Changsha. The Siang River highway is broken by the North River which has to be crossed by ferry boat. By making use of the bus connections it is now possible to complete the journey from Canton to Hankow and vice-versa in 3 days 14 hours. A through passenger would have to take a train to Lok Chong, spend the night there, take a train the next morning to Ping Shek where he would transfer to a bus and proceed to the provincial border, transfer to another bus and proceed to Hengchow, cross the river at Hengchow and spend the night there, proceed by bus the next morning to Changsha, spend the night there and continue by rail the next day to Wuchang.

Prosperity Points

The principal products of the country traversed by the railways are cereals, eggs, wood oil and minerals. I passed through hundreds of square miles of rice and saw quite a lot of trees grown for use in manufacture of wood oil. In addition to rice there were sweet potatoes, peanuts, sugar and wheat. Antimony and Wolfram exist and there is a considerable quantity of coal. The Ping-Siang coal mines are well known. The coal obtained here is of a high quality and is being used for the construction of a large scale and the Administration are buying this coal for their locomotives and plant at a cost of slightly under $5.00 per ton. I understand that Leiyang coal compares quite favourably with Kiping.

The prosperity of the Canton-Hankow Line must depend to a large extent on the rehabilitation of the present terminal sections and on the suitable road and rail connections to Kiangsi, Kwangsi and Kwelchow.

A thorough timing of 49 hours is contemplated for the through express. A drastic increase in speed will be necessary before the railway is in a position to handle its full quota of traffic.

Optimistic Views

There is no doubt that the completion of the Railway will act as a great stimulant to trade along the areas served by it. Local products will be enabled to be distributed in an even manner and this should accelerate the growth and prosperity of the various regions tapped. Authoritative statements have been made from time to time to the effect that the line will carry south the produce of all China south of the Yangtze. I regret that I cannot subscribe to these optimistic views. Traffic will only move by rail if it is able to bear the transportation costs involved. If these costs exceed a certain limit, traffic will either turn to other means of transportation or cease to move. Water-borne rates are very much less than rail-borne rates, so that water transportation from Chuchow to Hankow and from Hankow to Shanghai must always remain a powerful competitor to the Railway. The latter will in my opinion be used mainly for the transport of valuable goods requiring maximum expedition, those which command a reasonable price in relation to freight charges, those which are destined for shipment to Manila and places west of Hongkong, those which may be distributed from either Canton or Hongkong, and the transport of goods of all classes from south of Hengchow. Commodities not embraced in the above classification have a far cheaper water-borne route via the Tung Ting Lake and the Yangtze available for their movement. Hengchow, which is midway between Canton and Hankow, may be considered the economic divide from which most goods will flow either north or south. Bulk commodities such as coal, however, should move south over the line provided the ton-mile rate is sufficiently attractive.

Trade Stimulation

There appears to be no doubt that large quantities of wood oil, cereals, fruit and eggs will move south by rail as soon as the railway is completed, whilst metals and minerals will be transported in increasing quantities as soon as the various commodities such as salt, sugar, flour, and machinery should be transported by the return haul.

Passenger traffic between all points in the North, the upper Yangtze valley, and Canton and Hongkong will be stimulated considerably by the completion of the line, as previously a round-about route via Shanghai had to be taken. The line is sufficiently beautiful to attract tourists, provided suitable accommodation is provided at stop-overs. The carrying of higher class passenger traffic must depend to a great extent on speed, so that the 40 hours overall timing between Canton and Hankow at present contemplated cannot be regarded with satisfaction. This timing will no doubt be reduced progressively in the course of a few years to less than 24 hours, so that when the line from Hankow to Peking is rehabilitated, it may be possible to travel by rail from Hongkong to Peking in 2 1/2 days. Then again the through route to Calais via Siberia, Moscow, Warsaw and Berlin is not beyond the realms of possibility, as the first 150 miles step towards changing to standard gauge of the Russian systems which extend from Hanking to Minsk has already been taken.

Thanks Expressed

Rotarian Professor R. Robertson, called upon to thank the speaker, said the address had been so comprehensive that they had all learned something more about the importance of this vital line of communication for South China. It must be a great source of pride to Chinese that their countrymen had entirely planned and executed this central section.

Among the visitors welcomed were Messrs. C. W. MacGowan, F. Kendall, J. J. Johnson, and J. F. Grosse all of Hongkong, and J. M. Henry (Canton), R. W. Clarke, (Manila), and C. D. Penny.

By a show of hands members decided to arrange a dinner in connection with the forthcoming visit of Rotarian C. T. Wang, Governor of the Chinese Rotary District. The function was adopted as the alternative to a dinner dance and will take place between February 18 and 22.

Baby's Own Tablets.

Parents in many parts of the world have come to rely on Baby's Own Tablets for the treatment of their children's health troubles.

One such parent is Mrs. E. J. Mulligan, a Canadian mother residing at Kazubazua, Quebec, who speaks of the Tablets in these words: "I am living and I have given Baby's Own Tablets to them all—for colds, fevers, stomach and bowel troubles and during teething."

The fact that all Mrs. Mulligan's children are thriving is striking tribute to the merits of Baby's Own Tablets as a health corrective for the young. Originated by an eminent medical child-specialist, the Tablets have a mild laxative action and gently cleanse and tone up the little ones' stomach and bowels. They dispense with the use of harsh purgatives, indigestion, allay colic, break up colds and croup, check diarrhoea, expel worms, and are of immediate help during painful periods of teething. From chemists everywhere you can obtain Baby's Own Tablets.

U.S. NEUTRALITY CONTROVERSY

The controversy that is raging in the United States on the question of an extension of the provisions of the Neutrality Bill is easily understandable. On the one side, we have those who want America to follow a policy of isolation at all costs; on the other, there are ranged those who believe that the United States, although not a member of the League of Nations, should do her utmost to uphold the principles to which that body stands committed. In view of America's adherence to various pacts aimed at preventing war and stopping it once it breaks out, there should be doubt as to her attitude in such a contingency as has arisen by Italy openly disregarding her covenants not to resort to wars of aggression. Yet so strong is the American tradition not to become entangled in outside quarrels that there is natural hesitancy to take any step which might involve the United States in another war. Before the Neutrality Bill came into being, supporters of the League considered with dubious and anxious eyes the prospect of a rigid American refusal to allow any diminution of U.S. trading rights. But it was soon seen that the Roosevelt Government, at the first test, interpreted strict neutrality in such a way as to make possible co-operation with the League in collective measures to restrain a peace-breaker. In the proclamation which he issued in October, the President put an embargo on the export, to either country involved in the dispute, of arms, munitions and implements of war. The reasons for his action were plainly stated in the words that he was "obliged to recognise the simple and indisputable fact that Ethiopian and Italian armed forces are engaged in a combat which is creating a state of war within the intent and meaning of the joint resolution of Congress." He added, "in these specific circumstances, I desire it to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either belligerent do so at their own risk." Whatever may have been President Roosevelt's intentions in taking this course, the impression created was that the League could proceed with its measures against Italy, the defined aggressor, confident in the knowledge that the United States would not stand in the way of their effectiveness. When all is said and done, the observation made by the Chinese Ambassador to Washington, Mr. Alfred Sze, that a neutrality policy based on mere isolation cannot contribute to world orderliness, hits off the position to a nicety. It would be strange indeed were America to be regardless of the necessity of doing all that lies within her power to see that violators of world peace are not permitted a free hand.

THE captain, navigating officers, engineers, apprentices, and crews all hate the sea these days.

By that I mean they hate the conditions in which they have to work. Perhaps it has always been like that, and our ideas of the glories of the sea have just been based on ignorance.

After all we have been the world's premier maritime power for 284 years. The officers and men of the merchant navy have been the Royal Navy's first reserve throughout the centuries.

And now these officers and men want to leave the sea. So many of them are looking for "shore jobs" that when a £4 a week harbourmaster's job was vacant recently there were 500 applicants from the sea. The Officers' Federation has been called on to give advice to sailorsmen urging them not to put their little savings into mysterious businesses in order to find a shore job.

FURTHER than that, the Federation and the National Union of Teachers combined to produce a pamphlet for parents,

NOTES OF THE DAY

PROSPERITY

His Late Majesty King George V was a firm friend of the League of Nations, and during his lifetime showed that his own philosophy had much in common with that on which the international institution at Geneva was founded. Like most of the leading statesmen of his time, this Sovereign recognised that only by the paths of peace could a great Empire progress from strength to greater strength, and to lasting prosperity. Whenever he had the opportunity he stressed the need for world recognition of this truth. Like the Greeks, this Monarch appreciated that man's best works were accomplished in an atmosphere of security; and that security could only be assured when peace was guaranteed. It was for His Majesty's funeral that so many of the statesmen and rulers of Europe assembled in London recently, and the fact that advantage was taken of their presence there, and in Paris later, to institute conversations of a diplomatic character is easily understood. The criticism in some circles that these men came to mourn and not to talk politics seems rather far-fetched when one remembers how keen was the late Sovereign for any labour in the interests of peace. We are sure he would have been happy to think that, to crown his efforts in this sphere, his funeral had served to bring together men of prominence who could further the world's plans for security.

these specific circumstances, I desire it to be understood that any of our people who voluntarily engage in transactions of any character with either belligerent do so at their own risk." Whatever may have been President Roosevelt's intentions in taking this course, the impression created was that the League could proceed with its measures against Italy, the defined aggressor, confident in the knowledge that the United States would not stand in the way of their effectiveness. When all is said and done, the observation made by the Chinese Ambassador to Washington, Mr. Alfred Sze, that a neutrality policy based on mere isolation cannot contribute to world orderliness, hits off the position to a nicety. It would be strange indeed were America to be regardless of the necessity of doing all that lies within her power to see that violators of world peace are not permitted a free hand.

DON'T send your boy to sea.

whose refrain might be described as, "Don't send your boy to sea, Mr. Worthington."

And the whole story from the water-front is coming to Parliament and the homes of the land-lubbers this year, early in February.

Parliament will be asked to amend the Merchant Service Acts, and the Board of Trade will be urged to apply safety regulations more rigorously.

Within the last year two of the greatest authorities on shipping in this country have assured us that all is well.

Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, member of a family distinguished in shipping, and the Minister responsible for the administration of our antiquated shipping laws, said on March 26, 1935, in the House of Commons, "Our manning scale and method is a model for the whole world."

Mind you, the Officers' (Merchant Navy) Federation in a recent report have irreverently added: "If our antiquated Merchant Shipping Acts provide a model for the world it is time the world followed a more up-to-date model in shipping matters!"

Mr. Runciman's advisers at the Board of Trade a few months later marred the value of Mr. Runciman's proud boast on the floor of the House.

For four months questions to whether subsidies from the annual £2,000,000 public fund for helping to build new ships would be given only to shipowners who observe the full conditions laid down by the National Maritime Board (whose functions I will describe later).

The reply given by Government spokesmen was evasive. And this is why! Two days after a demand had been made that subsidies should be given only to good shipowners who observe the rules, officials at the Board of Trade wrote to the National Maritime Board asking if an agreement about certain ships having to carry three foreign ships was still in force. "If Of the 1,068 rescued seamen, this agreement is not in effect only 176 were foreigners."

tive operation, on what date did it cease to be so?" asked the board responsible for the welfare of shipping.

The Board of Trade did not know in July 1935 whether an agreement of great importance to British shipping was in force or not. The fact is, this agreement has been in operation since 1929.

THEN, a month ago the Chamber of Shipping issued a remarkably reassuring document to prove that British shipping was safer than ever.

"With a view to correcting any wrong inferences that may be drawn from isolated disasters," explained the Chamber, "the following statement has been issued. Our shipping is now two and a half times as safe as before the war."

But the Chamber's statement was prepared three or four days before the end of 1935, and did not include 1935.

The National Union of Seamen, furious at what they call "whitewashing by the Chamber," have prepared statistics from official sources which include the toll of life on sea in 1935.

For the three years up to and including 1935, 186 lives were lost from British crews. That was the worst triennial return since 1924-26, when, by a coincidence, the toll was also 186.

"We are now beginning to feel the result of the reductions in manning of British ships in 1933," declare the seamen.

Round our coasts 1935 was the busiest year for the lifeboat since 1919. There were 376 launches to serve the rules, officials at the Board of Trade wrote to the National Maritime Board asking if an agreement about certain ships having to carry three foreign ships was still in force. "If Of the 1,068 rescued seamen, this agreement is not in effect only 176 were foreigners."

HERE is why our shipping laws were antiquated. The Merchant Shipping Act was conceived in the ideas of Drake's time and the sailing ship days. It has not been amended since 1906.

In the meantime there have come into being motor ships, Diesel engine ships, oil burning ships, ships with super-heaters, and ships with self-trimming devices.

Britain, still the greatest maritime power in the world, only recently defined what a deck-hand is. But there is no law indicating wage scales for sailors, firemen, and stewards. Australia is more advanced than Britain in this respect.

A ship trading from a United Kingdom port carrying fewer than twelve passengers may go abroad from the Elbe to Brest over the world's most congested waterways without carrying a single qualified officer on the bridge or in the engine-room.

There are British ships trading between two foreign ports without a single Briton on board.

SINCE the war the Government has left control of the mercantile marine to the National Maritime Board, on which are representatives of shipowners, officers, and seamen. But the board has no statutory authority, and shipowners can, and do, snap their fingers at its agreements.

Well, the officers have broken the tradition of their profession and have decided to fight along trade union lines. No more velvet-glove methods.

The officers' leaders, with grave deliberation, admit they have even considered the use of the strike weapon as an ultimate argument. They call it "laying-up" ship. Captains and chief engineers are exempt from this order.

What are their complaints?

A British first officer receives £16 4s. a month. His Dutch counterpart receives £30 13s. 6d. a month; French £25 19s. 5d.; German £23 2s. 2d.; Danish £21 17s. 6d.; Italian £19 4s.; and Norwegian £19 2s. 11d. Only from official sources which include the toll of life on sea in 1935.

THE second officer in one of the biggest liners leaving this country for the East, declared Earl Howe in the House of Lords, "responsible under the captain for the navigation of the ship, has a maximum salary of four guineas a week. A typist commands very nearly an equivalent salary."

They swear they will no longer tolerate conditions which permit secret wage cuts by owners whose conditions of employment are that full official wages are nominally paid, but 10 per cent. must be "voluntarily" handed back to the company; where four English apprentices work under a Chinese boatswain in a ship whose sole crew consists of four Chinese seamen; where the captain and officers are forced to do manual labour, leaving a seaman to steer without a look-out, with instructions to whistle the officers if another ship is sighted; where occasional passengers are carried and apprentices have to sleep in the captain's bathroom; and where the shipowners are not responsible for medical treatment for injuries if the victim is landed at an English port. (Shipowners are responsible for medical treatment in a foreign port.)

Officers want a pension. This would add less than 1 per cent. to the running costs of a tramp steamer, and less than 1/4 per cent. to the running costs of a liner.

EVERY statement I have made in this article is from an official document of one or other of the shipping bodies.

It is true that there are two big shipping companies who pay more than agreed rates; who pension their officers; who grant annual leave, and who fully return with the utmost consideration the loyalty of their staff.

They are the leaders in a new movement among shipowners to improve wages and introduce more liberal manning provisions.

The crusade to stamp out the bad owner will continue.

Correspondents Object To Cricket Report

"INACCURACIES" ALLEGED

What Really Happened GAME WAS WELL SAVED

Below will be found a letter from two spectators of the I.R.C. v. K.C.C. first division league cricket match on Saturday who firstly accuse the Telegraph of publishing an unfair and inaccurate report of the game in yesterday's issues and then offer a certain amount of detailed description of how the I.R.C. saved the game.

Sir:—Mistakes and inaccuracies in the sporting section of the local press are not unknown and sometimes may be excusable, but two reports of the cricket matches played on Saturday were unusually grim and, in one case, unfair and cannot pass without comment.

We will take the I.R.C. v. K.C.C. game at Soekunpoo first. We were watching throughout the latter part of the game in a car from different angles, and therefore speak with first-hand knowledge of what we write. Incidentally, neither of us are members of these two clubs, though we have friends in both, and we are therefore writing quite impartially.

We both had the impression after the match that the Indians had done very well to force a draw, and that three of their side, in particular, deserved great credit for the part they played. When we read the newspaper accounts of the game, however, we received a surprise. "Decidedly lucky," "lucky draw," "extremely lucky," these expressions were freely used. We beg to disagree firstly, not having won, but the inference in the press reports that the Indians were continuously watched over by the Goddess of Luck is not correct.

At approximately five o'clock what chances the home side may have had of winning the game were practically gone. Their best bat had run himself out ingloriously, their captain failed. At 5.20 the match was well on the way to being won and lost. At 5.35 the home side were in a position to win the match. At 5.40 the agreement between the Pavilion clock and our watches and we are not being dogmatic about the times only a miracle could save the Indians, or so it looked. Their "keeper" and sound bat (S. A. Simal, we think) got out. The position now was that with two of their youngest bats and A. R. Minu, the interloper batter, mark the word hitter, i.e., a man who would probably not have lasted one over under the circumstances—to go in, there was roughly forty odd minutes of play left.

NEVER LOOKED LIKE GETTING OUT

At this stage Arculli went in to partner his namesake. They stayed together some twenty minutes, during which they never looked like getting out, and it was a surprise to us when out of them came a full-on and was bowled. There was absolutely nothing lucky or fluky about their work. On the contrary, everything was against them.

K. Nazarin succeeded (we took the trouble to verify) in his press reports and they seem correct enough, with 22 minutes to go. If there was nothing "chancy" about the first partnership there was even less about this—to all intents and purposes the last stand. Every ball was dealt with unfalteringly as it should have been—either let severely alone or stopped dead. Nazarin played back mostly, while Arculli preferred to smother the ball at its pitch. Both were remarkably cool and unfustered, though Arculli made no secret of the fact that he knew he was faced with a stiff task. He was somewhat vocal, his "No's," "Well let's," and "Well Stopped's" being easily audible from his seat; these must have been disconcerting to the Kowloonites, but there is, so far as I know, nothing in the rules against exercising the lungs, so long as it stops short of warbling!

The light became worse and worse; in fact, in the last ten or fifteen minutes it was absurd to have continued. Kowloon crowded in until they were almost on top of the batsmen and it must have been a temptation to have tried to kill one or two of them, but nobly they restrained themselves and the end came with them still in triumphant possession—per nobis fratrum! In all, M. el Arculli batted some 25 minutes, Y. el Arculli 40, K. Nazarin 22, this in the face of very heavy odds and not one of them gave the slightest chance, the first lapse of the first-named being his last. If it is the lucky part of it, it is that the batsmen were not so unlucky in not being able to force a draw after all their efforts, we would not argue but all these headlines about the Indians' luck is undoubtedly a - disparagement to these three match-savers, if not to the whole of the Home Team.

THE COMPLAINT

We had hoped to see in your cricket notes of to-day a fairer account but instead we saw the best part of your sports page devoted to an "interesting" point of cricket law, the intricacy or interest of which we fail utterly to appreciate; and what there was about the actual play reflects no credit on the Indian R.C. at all.

"R. Abbit" is, we believe, the cricket scribe of Hongkong, and one would have thought he would have paid a little more attention to detail and accuracy, but the same old "Lucky" flashed from the headlines and in the body of the report, "somehow or other it was done."

The other "grouse" is your aforementioned correspondent's critique of the Varsity game. (We watched the Varsity but, subsequently going down to Soekunpoo to see the Indian innings.)

It says Gosano had a nice, hard-hit shot. Incidentally it was 91, but we will pass that. Does that description include some really beautiful "cow" shots and two chances at least which should have been held, not to mention (Continued on Page 7.)

BISLEY BETTER FOR TERRITORIALS

Welcome Concessions By The War Office

The War office has authorized pay and allowances to be drawn by certain categories of the Territorial Force who wish to compete at Bisley. This concession, which is a definite part of the Army Council's scheme to encourage the Bisley form of shooting, should, together with the Free issue of the Pattern "11" rifle, do much to remove existing grievances and make it possible for Territorials to be once more adequately represented amongst the marksmen of the Empire, writes a London daily.

The seventy-second annual prize meeting of the National Rifle Association will be held from Monday, July 6, to Saturday, July 13. The National Small-Bore Meeting at Bisley will be from July 6 to 11, and the Central Meetings of the Army, Navy, and Royal Marines will start on June 29 and finish on July 4.

The Territorial Army Association's meeting starts at Bisley on July 13. The prize shoots are to be done away with in the King's Prize and other major competitions run by the association, and in their place two compulsory sighting shots will be fired. The competitor, when he has fired these, will be allowed to count either the second or neither or both towards his score.

BASEBALL PLANS

London League Teams

Mr. S. E. Parkes, who controls Rugby League's activities in London, has decided to take a hand in the new London baseball movement and will establish two teams in membership with the London Major Baseball League. George Nepin, Stratham and Mitcham's famous New Zealand Rugby player, is also a baseball expert. One of the several among London Rugby League contingent and other players will be imported from Canada.

The League now consists of the following: White City, Harringay, West Ham, Hackney Wick, Catford, Stratham and Mitcham, and Wandsworth. There will be one more team. The executive committee of the National Baseball Association has passed the constitution of the new London Major Baseball League, and plans are now nearing completion. Each team will have a mid-week match per week, and one home match every second Saturday afternoon. The League starts on May 9, and continues into early September. There will also be two amateur leagues, East London and West London.

To-day's Badminton Programme

MEN'S DOUBLES ENCOUNTERS

(By "Veritas").

Errors in the printing of the official fixture book apparently constitute the reason why Eliot Hall "A" have no games scheduled between February 5 and March 4 in the men's doubles division of the badminton league.

In fact it appears that the book provides them with three matches short of the full programme, while both Eliot Hall "B" and Kowloon Tong have only 22 matches down for decision. The programme should consist of 24 matches.

The Hon. Secretary of the Badminton Association has expressed the hope that Eliot Hall "A" will make every effort to fix matches by mutual arrangement during the next four weeks.

This evening they are due to meet Eliot Hall "B", while three other games are down for decision. St. John's entertain Kowloon Tong and appear safe for a win, while Fire Brigade may be confronted with a ticklish proposition when they engage V.R.C. at the Central Police Station.

St. Andrew's "A" have a home game with Talkoo, but it is not known whether the Dockyard club can turn out a team. At the time of writing St. Andrew's had heard nothing from Talkoo. If the programme goes off according to arrangement the following games will be played.

St. John's v. Kowloon Tong
Fire Brigade v. V.R.C.
St. Andrew's "A" v. Talkoo
Eliot Hall "A" v. Eliot Hall "B"

BIGGEST CRICKET GROUND PLAN

Melbourne Prepares For 100,000 Crowd

Melbourne, Jan. 9. Plans to make the Melbourne Cricket Ground one of the largest in the world have been approved by the trustees of the ground, who are to spend $100,000 for alterations to enable 100,000 people to be accommodated.

Double-decker concrete stands will be built with room for 70,000 spectators. At least 35,000 of these will be seated, and most of them will be under cover.

All the improvements will be completed late in the year, in readiness for the visit of the next England team. It is understood that the fears of the Cricket Association that the light may be affected by the high buildings at both ends of the pitch will be overcome. It is not thought that the batsman's line of vision will be obstructed.

The buildings will be erected on similar lines to those existing in some American stands. The lower deck will be 20 feet high, and the upper deck will be 10 feet higher than the lower. There will be dressing-rooms, refreshment kiosks, casualty rooms, and rest-rooms.

When the improvements have been completed no ground in world will compare with it from the point of view of the comfort of spectators and players.

RECREIO WIN

LAST NIGHT'S BADMINTON

Recreio "B" conceded but one game in their men's doubles badminton league match against the Sailors and Soldiers' Home on the latter's court last night.

J. J. Xavier and E. A. R. Alves, Recreio's third pair lost to J. Hall and M. Merritt S. and S. Home first string by 21-18.

H. H. Harris and J. Heath put up some excellent performances for the losers, earning double figures in all three games, but the Recreio were always the better team. Scores:—

Both half-back lines were seen to advantage, Bates, at centre half for Hongkong, being particularly prominent. On the other hand, his opposite number, P. Angelo, coped admirably with the stickwork of the Hongkong forwards time and again.

Both sets of forwards spoiled many promising chances by faulty distribution and missed several chances of adding to their respective scores. Both goals, Shields and Almada had to keep contently on the alert.

Although weakened by the absence of the two halves, the visitors put up a determined struggle throughout. They thoroughly enjoyed the match and expressed the hope that the opportunity of engaging in another tussle will soon be afforded them.

MACAO WIN

KEEN HOCKEY MATCH

AGAINST H.K. CLUB

(Our Own Correspondent)

Macao, Feb. 2.

Local interest in hockey was displayed this afternoon when a large crowd turned out to witness a friendly encounter here, H.E. the Acting Governor of Macao, Dr. J. Pereira Barbosa, being among the spectators. The match was between the first teams of the Macao Hockey Club and the Hongkong Hockey Club, the visitors being defeated by three goals to one.

The first two goals registered for the home team were scored in quick succession after ten minutes of play. A. Angelo was responsible for the first and the second was secured by Laertes Costa from a short corner.

A feature of the play was the constant dribbling as the ball was carried up and down the field. The visitors' defence was strong, but the work of the forward line can only be described as patchy. Fowler, at right wing, was unfortunate to miss scoring just before the interval.

STRONG HALF BACK LINES

Hardly had a minute passed after play was resumed, when a breakaway by the Macao forwards put the home team further ahead with a splendid goal by P. Angelo.

Despite being three goals down, the visitors fought back and were rewarded when Woodhouse penetrated the house defence and reduced Macao's lead with a smart goal.

Both half-back lines were seen to advantage, Bates, at centre half for Hongkong, being particularly prominent. On the other hand, his opposite number, P. Angelo, coped admirably with the stickwork of the Hongkong forwards time and again.

SKI-JUMPER COVERS 270 FEET

S. Erickson Defeats Title Holder

Garmisch, Feb. 3. Leaping through the air over a distance of 81 metres, or nearly 270 feet, Sven Erickson, a Swedish snow-shoe star, yesterday won the special international ski-jumping contest, held in the "Great Olympic Jump" 111 metres (about 365 feet) high.

Birger Ruud of Norway, holding the world's ski-jumping title was second, and the United States sportsman Roy Mikkelsen came in third. The distance of the jump was shortened yesterday due to heavy rain which spoiled the snow.

BAER THINKS HE CAN BEAT LOUIS—

If He Trained For A Year

MANAGER NOT SO OPTIMISTIC

BROTHER MIGHT DO IT

Fair Oaks, Calif., Feb. 4.

Max Baer would be willing to meet Joe Louis again on a "winner take all" basis if the Brown bomber should win the World's heavyweight championship.

"I don't care anything about fighting again—never did like to fight—but if Louis wins the title I'd like to meet him, winner take all," the former champion told me while sipping a cocktail before dinner in Ancil Hoffman's elaborate Spanish-type ranch house.

"Beat him?" Baer mused. "Well, maybe, if I could get my hands in shape. Boy, if I could get a crack at him with the understanding that the winner copper all the receipts, I'd cut out smoking, work hard and get in better shape than I ever was before."

NOT SO ENTHUSIASTIC

Ancil Hoffman, manager and sort of foster father of the Baers, Max and Buddy, doesn't share the playboy fighter's enthusiasm, although he concedes Max "a chance" if he trained properly.

"It would take him a year of hard work to get in shape," Ancil said. "If I could take him into the mountains for a year, keep him away from everybody and really make him work, I think he might stand a chance of beating Louis. I doubt if Max would work hard enough, though. He's too lazy."

"Max took the worst beating from Louis that I ever saw a man take from anybody. He doesn't keep his hands up. He's easy to hit and Louis certainly hit him plenty. I don't want him to fight again unless he's in shape. I wouldn't want him to get punch drunk."

And Max won't fight again, either—unless he could meet Louis on a winner take all basis after the sensational Detroit negro has moved to the top.

BUDDY BAER MORE LIKELY

Buddy Baer? Now there's some one to think about when eating around for a "white hope," in Hoffman's opinion.

Buddy is too young and inexperienced now, but after two more years of training and fights, he may develop sufficiently to warrant a crack at Louis.

"Buddy is a serious worker," Hoffman said. "He keeps his hands up and he can take punishment. There's no heavyweight now who can beat Louis; but I believe Buddy is the most promising prospect. I intend to bring him along slowly and carefully."

Ancil is trying to find a good trainer and sparring mate for Buddy. Tommy Loughran would be the best bet, he believes. Max is no good as a boxing partner for Buddy, because the two brothers lose their tempers when in the ring together and start fighting viciously. Hoffman let them box together twice, but he will not risk it again.

Baer and Hoffman have been deluged with requests from fans all over the world to attempt a comeback. Max is proud of an apple box full of Christmas cards. Hoffman's daughter handles his fan mail which continues to pour in daily. Much of it comes from promoters seeking to sell him stock.

The huge-shouldered fighter likes to kid about his match with Louis. He has a toy which his mother sent him, and he takes delight in winding it up and watching the tin fighters—white and black—swing at each other. One or the other gets knocked down before the spring unwinds.

WIFE'S INFLUENCE

More interested in the stage than in fighting, Max spends his time reading, plays, practising imitations and acting. He plays golf nearly every day and contracts with his wife, Mary, and the Hoffmans every other night. He seldom is seen to fight. Retiring early as a rule, he reads in bed for hours.

Mary Sullivan Baer had had a restraining influence. Charming good natured, she overlooks his sarcastic fibes, regards him as a playful little boy who loves to act. Their relations are harmonious.

"She's the grandest girl in the world," Max said. "I was awfully lucky to get her."

Hoffman has invested Baer's money in annuities. Max can't touch it. Otherwise he would spend it all. "I'll have a nice income for life," Ancil said, "and until the investments begin paying him interest, he can live comfortably on his income from benefits, refereeing and possibly some acting."—United Press.

FRANCE'S FRANTIC SEARCH FOR DAVIS CUP TALENT

MANY YOUNG PLAYERS DISAPPOINT: BOROTRA STILL BEATS THEM

Paris. Spurred on by the stinging defeats absorbed by its net players in the international matches of the past season, France is determined to be fully prepared for this year's campaign.

The board of strategy of the French Tennis Federation has put its players into the hands of its most competent coaches for intensive training, with great emphasis to be paid to the more promising of the younger players.

In addition to having players in excellent shape by the time the Davis Cup matches come around in May, the Federation hopes furthermore to have definitely discovered players best fitted for the singles and doubles.

YOUNGSTERS NOT PROMISING

What actually induced the Federation to take this step was the recent indoor Canet Cup play, the last official tournament of 1935. With only one exception, the youngsters failed to get anywhere, and the exception, 19-year-old lanky Bernard Destremau, was eliminated in the semi-finals. It was the veteran Jean Borotra who won the singles, men's and mixed doubles crowns.

If Borotra, who is no longer ranked in the singles, defeated the youngsters and the pick of the French stars, what will the ranking players of other countries do to them, reasoned the Federation. To make it much worse, French junior champion Destremau, the most promising player in this country since the advent of the Three Musketeers, cannot be counted upon.

ATTITUDE PERILS FUTURE

A season of local successes has made him aloof, independent and headstrong. He has refused with consistency to accept any counsel or advice from those who are in a position to give it. He has plenty to learn before he can be given the responsibility of representing his country in an international match. His attitude has irritated everyone and even the French sporting press has made him its special target.

When the players were ordered to go into immediate training, Destremau was excepted. An official stated that it would be a waste of time or money to coach Destremau while he remains in the clouds.

The only man sure of his Davis Cup post is left-handed Christian Bousset. The other post will probably go to either cocky Andre Merlin or south-paw Marcel Bernard.

DOUBLES ARE PROBLEM

The doubles problem is harder to solve. With Toto Brugnon's retirement from Davis Cup play in 1934, France called upon Bernard to play with Borotra but the result was not a happy one. Too easily discouraged, Bernard must have a partner to steady him and give him encouragement, and the brilliant but erratic Borotra, with an eye for the spectacular for the plaudits of the crowd, is not the ideal partner.

Coché Rene Lacoste may junk the combination and point a few seasons ahead by giving Bernard a young partner. Marcel Petru, 21, who is the nearest thing the French have to Ellsworth Vines, has shown a special leaning toward doubles playing. Then there is Pierre Barthelemy, stocky 18-year-old natural player. Bousset, himself, is too frail to play both singles and doubles, otherwise he would be the best bet.

On Feb. 13, 14 and 15 the result of this intensive training should make itself felt when the Paris-London matches are played at Dulwich, England.

M.C.C. TOURISTS

Dismissed for 176 Runs

Palmerston North, Feb. 4. The M.C.C. cricket tourists in New Zealand commenced a two-day match here to-day against Manawatu and were dismissed for only 176 runs in their first innings.

Murchison was the bowler who did all the damage, capturing six M.C.C. wickets for only 51 runs. J. Handstaff, the young New Zealand batsman, contributed 75 to the M.C.C. total.

At close of play to-day, Manawatu had lost seven wickets for 85 runs. —Reuter.

BRIDGE OLYMPIC

The Hongkong tournament of the World Bridge Olympic was held last night at the American Club whose premises were kindly offered for the evening.

Play started at 8 p.m. In addition to the play against par, the results of which will not be known here until April, special local prizes for high scores were awarded to:

North, Horace Lo; South, M. K. Lo; East, C. C. Black; West, Col. H. M. Fordham.

Second highest:

North, Mrs. A. Marsh; South, Mrs. W. T. Stanton; East, Mrs. F. Crapnell; West, Capt. Geo. Anderson.

WINTER OLYMPICS

FRANCE VERY CONFIDENT

EXPECT TO WIN SOME EVENTS

Paris, Feb. 3. Great confidence is expressed in France in the ability of her athletes to take a number of firsts in the Winter Olympics which open at Garmisch-Partenkirchen on February 6.

While France is being represented at Garmisch by probably the strongest team in her history, it is very doubtful whether her athletes will score so much as a single triumph due to the presence of the strong Austrian, Finnish, German, Swedish and Swiss teams.

The French delegation will consist of 42 athletes and 17 official attendants. Included in this total of 59, is a detachment of six Alpine Infantrymen, who will compete in the military ski races.

ICE-HOCKEY STRENGTH

As a result of hastily naturalizing three Canadian "rangers," only a few weeks ago, France's strongest bet will be her ice-hockey team. These three lads, who hail from Montreal, have been playing on Paris teams for the past few seasons. Two of them, Yven Cadorette and Paul Gagnon, are wings, and the third, strong, husky Andre Belhumeur is a back. The naturalization may have been hasty but it will certainly stick for the three will be obliged to do their military service next spring.

Of the remaining 11 players who are being sent to Garmisch, there are only three or four who can wield the puck in a style faintly reminiscent of that displayed by American and Canadian stars. French Sextet will also be deplorably weak at the goal.

Despite the several weaknesses, the French have the strongest team on the continent, thanks to the presence of the three Canadian "rangers," and they will probably win the European title for they could never hold the Canadian American sextet.

France will have only one skiler who can hope to hold his own against the Scandinavian and German aces. He is Andre Allais, 26 who was placed second last winter in the world championships at Megeve. He is champion of France at slalom, but it is in the decent speed races where he is expected to score. Andre Vignoles, who is superior to Allais, is not eligible for the games, for he is an instructor and thereby ruled out.

OUT OF RUNNING

France's Alpine Infantry men are strong but again the superior teams of other competing nations put the French out of running. The Bobsleigh is an open event with the Germans favoured in both the four-men and two-men bobs. The French are dark horses in the Bobsleigh. France will have no representatives in either ice-sliding races or figure events. Mr. and Mme. Brunet-Joly, who won the paired fancy skating at the last Olympics at Los Angeles, and were the sole entrants chosen for the fancy skating in February, dealt a severe blow to France's hopes when they refused to join the French team. Brunet-Joly explained that the French Olympic Federation refused to finance them for the period of training necessary to compete. The French Olympic body naturally had to turn down such a request for it had a distinct odour of professionalism.

Undoubtedly the Brunet-Joly couple's request was not more exigent than those made by most of the present day figure skating stars. It was not their request that had to be condemned but their method. —United Press.

F.A. COUNCIL

Shield Semi-Finals Draw To-day

The monthly meeting of the Council of the Hongkong Football Association will be held this afternoon, when the draw for the semi-final rounds of the Hongkong F.A. Shield will be made. The matches will be played on Saturday, February 22.

Among other business in the agenda is the selection of a team and a ground for the Governor's Cup match to be played on Saturday, and a ground for the Lal Wah Cup final between the Navy and the Chinese on March 8.

New Zealand Rugby Team Impresses

FINE DISPLAY AT KOSHIE

The New Zealand University Rugby Football team won the opening match of their Japanese tour on Sunday, January 26, when they beat All-Kwansai at Koshien by five goals and two tries (31 points) to a try (three points).

The spectators saw about 12 minutes of the game at that, so that in belatedly living up to advance notices and the impression they created in training, the tourists also conclusively answered the question whether they could stay in the corresponding fixture of two seasons ago, served notice that they may make a clean sweep of all their matches. For not even the national side will be able to stem the sort of football the tourists played in the closing minutes. It was irresistible, grand attacking attacks that had a touch of inspiration about them.

Player Injured

J. M. Watt, one of the New Zealand Rugby football tourists, was taken ill after the match and was confined to bed in the Koshien Hotel. Watt played in the game, but was not injured. O. W. Chapman remained behind at Koshien to keep him company, while the team continued on its tour.

TRIALS TO COMMENCE

HONGKONG FINDING BEST TEAM TO PLAY NEW ZEALAND

The usual Wednesday fixture for the Hongkong Football Club "A" XV has been cancelled and a trial game will be played to-day with a view to selecting the best possible XV to represent the Colony in the return game against the New Zealand University team on February 21.

The probable team is:

The possible team is:

Fus. Prece; Lieut. Fraser, R. H. Griffiths, H. C. Meeko, Lieut. St. Clair Ford; J. Hutchison, Lieut. Hamilton; E. P. Humphreys, G. S. Chambers, Lieut. Harrison, A. B. Woodman, S. H. Garrod, Lieut. Chaplain, F. J. McGilchrist, M. S. Cunningham. Referee, Mr. D. W. MacEwen.

There are several absentees who were originally chosen for places in the above teams, notably Lieut. J. Rice Evans and A. B. Evans who were chosen for the probabilities and J. H. McElroy and E. B. Gannell who were chosen for the possibilities. The kick off is 5 p.m. on the Club ground.

WORLD BRIDGE OLYMPIC

WHAT CHECKED SCORES REVEAL

Olympic was held last night at the American Club, whose premises were kindly offered for the evening.

Play started at 8 p.m. with 40 pairs. In addition to the play against par, the results of which will not be known here until April, special local prizes for high scores were awarded to:

North—Mr. Horace Lo
South—Mr. M. H. Lo
East—Mr. C. C. Black
West—Col. H. M. Fordham

Second highest:

North—Mrs. A. Marsh
South—Mrs. W. T. Stanton
East—Mrs. Gordon P. H. Lum
West—Mrs. Gordon P. H. Lum

A check of score sheets to-day shows Mr. and Mrs. Lum as second highest in East and West scale.

The suggested bidding and play of several of the more interesting hands will be published later in the week.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

CRASH, WHY DID YOU TELL ME THOSE THINGS ABOUT

WELL, AS COACH OF
YOU SHOULD KNOW!

I DON'T KNOW WHAT YOU TOLD THE COACH, BUT WHATEVER IT WAS,
IT'S A LIE! FRECK
HAS ABSOLUTELY NOTHING
OF!!

YOU

SOME DAY YOUR
BE PUSHED ALL
INTO PEOPLE'S

WELL, IF FRECK

BECAUSE
OF THEIR
!!

AND, IF YOU ASK ME, CRASH, YOU'RE
SUCH A BIG PAIN, THAT IF YOU WORE
A GOLD CROWN AND CLIMBED ON A POGO
STICK, YOU'D BE A PERFECT IMITATION OF A JUMPING TOOTHACHE!!

SERIAL STORY—

BARGAIN BRIDIE

by KATHARINE HAVILAND-TAYLOR

CHAPTER XLVII

There was a moon and after dinner Elinor led the way to the terrace. Barrett and Bob Telford settled themselves beside her, watching the yellow disc rise in the sky. Higgins brought their coffee to them and presently Bessie and Jim Throppe and their boys arrived.

Sexton, who was the youngest and thus able to forget old times, was talking about the motor boat. The other boys spoke eagerly of college in the fall. Bessie listened happily. She knew that something she had said to Elinor that day had made a decided difference. Bessie had seen the changed light in the girl's eyes, a little gleaming of her lips. Poor Elinor who was so young, with so much of life to learn!

"We must be going now," Bessie said when the clock indoors struck 10. After the Throppe had gone, singing on their way down the hill like ancient, travelling minstrels, Elinor went upstairs. For a long while she stood by the window of her darkened room looking over the moonlit world below.

That afternoon Bessie had nodded toward Gerald, playing on the beach with Sexton, and said, "Elinor, I feel that you're misinterpreting something and Jim's forbidden me to say more. He says Barrett would explain if he dared and I must not—if Barrett won't. But, dear, even if the situation were as it seems, you know a woman's job is to help a man make his future worth while. It isn't right to brood over the past. Everything Barrett can become is in your hands. What he was before you knew him—"

Elinor had begun to tremble. She had not wanted to talk about that even to Bessie. Nevertheless Bessie went on to be jealous about what he had been but you don't really love me, dear, until you want to help the person you love to cover old wounds and forget them. If Gerald is Barrett's son you'll never regret making Barrett as happy as he can be about it. And when you're old and I am, you'll realize that the only thing you've been hurt were when you made others downcast by showing them that they hurt you. Barrett loves you. Anyone can see that!

Elinor had begun to cry. "I do love him, Aunt Bessie," she whispered. "But—"

They had talked for an hour and Bessie was sure that in some way Elinor had begun to understand the things she longed to tell her and could not.

It was half past 10 when Barrett mounted the stairs. Bob Telford had gone to his room half an hour earlier.

There was a telegram for Elinor and Barrett, not wishing to disturb her, decided to look it beneath her door. He had writing to do and he knew that he could not sleep. Long training had made it possible for him to concentrate and thereby gain a sort of relief. He worked out his mind and again, as he sat writing, his pen would slow and the objects he was describing—objects he had unearthed after centuries of hiding in the earth—would fade, to be replaced by Elinor's face.

Hard moments those, moments when it was all he could do to stay at his desk. Often they left him spent and shaking. It was the futility of the situation that troubled him, the fact that it was all so unnecessary and was making Elinor so miserable. He tapped on her door and for his surprise heard her say, "Come in!"

"I—I—Barrett," she explained. "Come in," she repeated.

He opened the door. She was sitting up in bed, the light from a lamp beside her shining down on her hair. "Have you a moment to spare?" she asked.

"Of course." He didn't understand this. "I brought up a telegram that came for you," he said.

Elinor took it and he sat down in a chair that he had not used for years. He opened the envelope with its small transparent window. Then, "Mother's married!" she gasped.

She gave him the message and he read it with a certain grim amusement. Lida had married Chicago merchant whose reputation Barrett knew well—a Bluebeard Creesus with a string of discarded wives in his cupboard. He would, Barrett reckoned, be a match even for Lida.

"Well!" he said, and could think of no more suitable comment.

"I expected that—or something like it," Elinor admitted, "but not quite so soon." She grew silent then. Barrett felt she was trying to say something more and that it was not for her to begin.

He had his own speech to make and he wanted to get it over. "Elinor," he said, and then hesitated.

"Yes?" Why was she looking at him in that way? It was dangerous for both of them.

"Elinor, I want to tell you that I respect you wholly and in every way. I haven't always—I had an idea—a rather fixed idea—that you were carrying on some sort of affair with Bob Telford. I'm thoroughly ashamed of that now and I hope you can forgive me. I know how fine you are, in every way and have always been. I'm—"

"But, Barrett! I couldn't do a thing like that!" she said, quickly. "I couldn't. I've seen too much of it to be able to indulge in it myself. I've been square—that way, but not in others. I've been—small, Barrett! I know I have."

He saw that her lips were trembling. "I don't see that—," he disagreed.

"Yes, you do! Or you could—if you would I've made you so unhappy!"

"That wasn't your fault," he assured her. "I know I hurt you—deeper."

She shook her head violently. "I hurt myself," she confessed unsteadily, "by acting the way I have."

She began to cry. She had cried so often in the last weeks. Barrett moved toward her; he could not help it. He settled on the edge of the bed and drew her into his arms. He patted her back with one big hand, held her pressed close to him with the other. His own eyes were stinging.

"I want to make you happy," he heard her say brokenly.

"If you're happy then I will be," he told her, hardly more steadily. "It's a little time, Barrett," she said. "I'll be just as I was—before. I need a little more time to get adjusted."

"Darling!" He didn't intend that his arm should tighten but it did. He hid his face against her hair. He managed to say, "It's been—hell!"

"I love you!" Elinor said. Then, "Barrett! Barrett!" for she had felt the sob that shook him.

She remembered Bessie's words. Her arms were around him now, holding him tightly. Bessie had said you only loved truly when you wanted to help the one you loved to forget old wounds. Well, Elinor knew that she loved Barrett now.

He raised his face from her shoulder. "I'm sorry, Elinor," he said.

"Nothing matters but your happiness!" She broke in as he paused. She ran an unsteady hand over his hair, stiff sandy-hued hair. She tried to smile at him. His lips twitched; yet again his eyes filled.

He kissed her hands then, showing in the way he kissed them all his hunger he had felt, all the great love he had for her. He would be endlessly patient, he declared, if only she would assure him that some day she might feel as she had before. He would do everything—everything—to make it easy.

There was one woman in his life. She was the one woman in his life. There was no one else. There never could be any other. He would never forgive himself for having doubted her fidelity.

"I worship you!" he had said roughly, then hid his face once more against her shoulder.

(To Be Continued.)

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS BY ST. ANDREW'S BRANCH

The St. Andrew's Branch of the Victoria Diocesan Missionary Association held its annual meeting in the Church hall last evening, with the Rev. J. R. Higgins, Vicar of St. Andrew's, in the chair.

Miss Armstrong, the Hon. Secretary, said satisfactory progress had been maintained by the branch throughout the past year. The branch continued to take an interest in relief work up-country, forwarding a number of mosquito nets for use in malarial infested districts, in addition to other help.

At the suggestion of the branch, the central body of the V.D.M.A. organised a meeting at Cheung Chau, which proved both enjoyable and useful.

The function organised to welcome Bishop Hall was a great success, the attendance exceeding all expectations. During the year, whilst and na-jong drives and other social functions were held, which proved highly successful, and the funds obtained were put to good use.

The report and accounts were unanimously adopted.

The Chairman then thanked Miss Armstrong for the invaluable work rendered by her as Hon. Secretary, and expressed regret that she had to relinquish this position owing to her leaving for home in the near future.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon. Secretary: Miss J. Smith.

KWEICHOW REDS

CONCERN FOR SAFETY OF MISSIONARIES

Shanghai, Feb. 4.
Chinese reports from Kweiyang (capital of Kweichow) say that the Kweichow provincial troops have now covered Hsiuwien, twenty miles north-west of Kweiyang from the invading Communists. The defeated Reds are stated to have retreated to Luliwang, about fifteen miles west of Hsiuwien. —Reuter.

Missionaries Endangered

Canton, Feb. 4.
With Kweiyang facing the danger of being captured by the Reds, anxiety is being felt here for the safety of the foreign missionaries there.

As far as it can be learned from British and American missionaries, however, have already evacuated. The latter include Rev. Mr. Daniel Crafts and his wife, of the China Inland Mission, who evacuated for Szechuen.

German priests at Tungien and other parts in north-east Kweichow evacuated several months ago.

It is noteworthy that the Catholic last Red invasion in Kweichow in May 1935 when churches at Tungien and Hunien and other cities were completely destroyed.

It is anticipated that if the Reds capture Kweiyang their next objective will be Anshun, west of Kweiyang. —Reuter.

Reds in Retreat

Canton, Feb. 4.
Messages received here from Kweichow authorities state that fighting between the Reds and the Central Government forces raged at Mapaiung. The Government forces after routing the invaders recaptured Chichau. It is believed the Reds are now attempting to advance to the west in order to reach the Yunnan border to join the Reds under Chu Teh, and then to establish a Red regime there.

Both Szechuen and Yunnan are reinforcing the frontiers and massing troops along the borders to repulse the invaders. Three divisions of Yunnan troops are reported to be concentrating on the border. It is also stated that General Liu Hsiang has detached eight Szechuen planes to Wuyang to assist the Central Government forces to bomb the Reds. —Reuter.

HELENA MAY CONCERT

EXCELLENT PROGRAMME FOR TO-MORROW

Music lovers are reminded that the Helena May concert-season closes in March, and none should miss the last opportunities of enjoying some notable and varied programmes before the artistically barren summer begins.

This Thursday we shall have the pleasure of hearing a new-comer, Mrs. McGowan (mezzo-soprano), as well as three artists already well known and popular in the Colony—Miss Caroline Braga (piano) and Mrs. Evelyn and Mr. Arnold (piano and cello). The programme is given below, and should attract all those who have attended the previous concerts and many who have not taken advantage of them. Hongkong's concert audiences are enthusiastic, but erratic, and many people forget until too late that there are only a dozen or so opportunities a year to hear the many really talented amateurs who they are with us. The concerts are timed at 5.30 p.m. for the convenience of all, and programmes last about one hour. —LYRIA.

The Programme

- Sonata in A minor.
Prelude—Gavotte—Le Papillon—Minuet.
Cello: Mrs. H. Arnold.
Piano: Mrs. H. Evelyn.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

An exceptionally talented cast has been listed for the principal roles in the latest Warner Bros. Production, "The Man on the Flying Trapeze". The fast-moving plot concerns the adventures of Benny, the "chisel", and his assistant, Healy, who are fugitives from the law because they failed to make income tax reports, upon advice of a shyster lawyer. Pendleton, the "G-Man", is close upon their heels when they decide to go to their desert resort, where they pretend to be stratosphere flyers. An aeroplane manufacturer offers them a balloon and a group of business men, vacationing at the resort, put up the money for the flight for the publicity attached to it. Benny and Healy are going to run away with the money at the last minute, but Benny meets an estranged wife, Una Merkel, at the resort and she promises to take him back if he'll go straight. He agrees, but Healy runs away with the money. Benny catches him and they go up in the balloon—and then the thrills and laughs come every second.

"Man On The Flying Trapeze"

Above all else W. C. Fields, screen comic, has a unique style of delivery which has endeared him to millions. He is starred in Paramount's "Man On The Flying Trapeze", which opened yesterday at the Queen's Theatre to delighted audiences, declaring he acquired his raspy voice as a youngster, and never has lost it. Few people know he started his career as a vocal comedian, turning to pantomime when he left for abroad. The Fields delivery is unique. The film, voiced reciting them, gives a distinctive humour that no other funny man on stage or screen can imitate or equal. Paramount put him in a picture called "International House". The public roared. He was As the Broadway "chisel", who loses his wife because of his shady dealings, but wins her love again and becomes a national hero by making a record-breaking stratosphere flight. Benny turned in a sterling performance. Una Merkel, as Benny's wife, shows her forte as a dramatic actress. Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton are superb in their respective roles of the "confidence man's" sidekick.

"It's In The Air"

In Ottawa To Arrange Transatlantic Airway

Colonel Sir Donald Banks (LEFT), Director-General of the General Post-Office of England; Col. F. C. Sheldermine, Director-General of Civil Aviation, Air Ministry, and Mr. C. E. Woods Humphrey, Managing Director of Imperial Airways, are now in Ottawa where they are arranging for the establishment of a British trans-Atlantic air service. It is believed that British and American, and possibly French, interests will collaborate in the trans-ocean mail service at the outset.

British Airliner Crashes—One Hurt!

The wreckage of an English air liner which crashed into a tree at the edge of the aerodrome at Renfrew, England, when the pilot had to make a landing in heavy fog and rain. With the exception of the radio operator, who had his arm broken, passengers and crew were uninjured. Yet, a few days later when the big flying boat, City of Khartoum, crashed into the sea of Alexandria, there was only one survivor. Twelve were lost.

Lonely while her explorer-husband passed Christmas in the polar regions, Lady Hubert Wilkins has announced adoption of a six-year-old girl, whom she has re-christened Suzanne after herself. Sir Hubert was told of the adoption on New Year's Day when Lady Wilkins told him the news over the short-wave radio. Lady Wilkins and Suzanne are shown together. She plans to adopt five more, she says.

MISS ELIZABETH OLSEN

LENGTHY MISSIONARY CAREER

A lifetime devoted to work in the mission field in the Far East ended with the death at the Matilda Hospital yesterday morning of Miss Elizabeth Olsen, aged 64 years, an American Methodist missionary.

Miss Olsen, who is well-known in missionary activities in Canton and Singapore, died after an illness of several months. Since April she has been devotedly looked after by her sister, Miss Mary Olsen, of the American Methodist Mission, in Singapore.

The deceased came to Penang in 1907, after several years missionary work in San Francisco, and later joined her sister, Miss Mary Olsen, at the American Methodist Mission, Singapore. She remained at Singapore for seven years and then went home on furlough, returning to the Far East during the early part of the Great War. She carried on missionary work independently at Canton, where she undertook the care of orphan children. She was a quiet worker, and no one knew how much she accomplished at Canton, as she was of an unassuming disposition and did not court publicity. She was very much liked by her fellow missionaries in Canton and Hongkong, and great sympathy is felt for her sister, who is now in Hongkong, and two other sisters and a brother in San Francisco.

The funeral took place yesterday at the Protestant cemetery, Happy Valley, the Rev. E. C. H. Tribbeck officiating at the Chapel of the Resurrection. The remains were then cremated at Sookungpo. The ashes of the deceased will be sent to San Francisco.

Among those present were her sister, Mary, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Reiton, Mr. and Mrs. Larson, Mr. A. Grant, Mrs. E. L. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Broadbent, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Broadbent, and Miss S. Moritz.

Wreaths were sent by her sister, Mary, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Broadbent, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Grant, the Penit Missionaries and Sophie Moritz.

Printed and Published for the Proprietors by FREDERICK PENNY FRANKLIN, at 1 and 3, Wyndham Street in the City of Victoria, Hongkong.

ROOSEVELT TAKEN WITH ECONOMY

Washington, Feb. 4. President Roosevelt, at a press conference, said he was preparing to reduce the lending authorization of various Government agencies, such as the R.F.C., the H.O.L.C., and the F.C.A., by over a billion dollars.

The President explained that a survey showed that the original authorization was no longer needed. He emphasized that the savings incurred would not be available to meet other Government expenses.

President Roosevelt pledged the orderly marketing of cotton holdings, but stressed that the reduction of lending authorization would not affect the Cotton Loan. He added that the speed of cotton liquidation will determine the need for the $100,000,000 still available for such loans.

ZINC TEN-CENT PIECES

WOMAN GAOLED FOR POSSESSION

Ng Wal-fong, 24, married woman, was brought before Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning and sentenced to four months' hard labour for possession of 210 counterfeit ten-cent pieces.

Detective-Sergeant Goodwin stated that on February 1 defendant was arrested by a Chinese detective at Fuk Wah Street near Shek Kip Mei Road, Shamshuipo. The woman was walking along and had over her shoulder a long shawl which reached down to her knees, and had her arms folded. The detective stopped defendant and told her that he was arresting her on suspicion of possession of counterfeit coins and took her back to the police station. She was searched at the station and was found to have $21 in counterfeit ten-cent pieces in a handkerchief which she held under her arm. She told the police that she had been asked to carry the coins by a man whom she did not know, and was promised fifty cents for her trouble.

Chu Wong, money-changer, stated that the coins were all counterfeit, and by their colour witness could see that they were all made practically of zinc. Witness had been in the money-changing trade for seven years and had given evidence in Court several times before.

Defendant, when questioned, stated that she had been given the coins to carry by a man, and was promised a few ten-cents for doing so. She was to have taken the coins to Wat Ching Street.

LICENCE NOT RENEWED

RESTAURANT KEEPER FINED

Siu Kan, keeper of the Ping Man Restaurant, No. 235 Des Voeux Road Central, was fined $20 by Mr. W. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a summons of allowing intoxicating liquor to be sold without an appropriate licence.

Inspector K. Andrews said defendant had not renewed his licence by January 16 when he was then warned by the S. C. A. that he should at least apply for a licence. On January 18 nothing had been heard from him, and a trap was set, two district watchmen being sent to punch by him at the restaurant, but defendant was not present. Another trap was set on January 22 and the charge then taken out. The licence was eventually taken out on February 3. The cost of the licence was $1,000.

ASSAULT CASE WITHDRAWN

CHINESE DETECTIVE INVOLVED

A summons alleging assault against Chinese detective C257, Kwong Yung, stationed at the Summit Police Station, was withdrawn by the complainant, Wong Chai, of fish stall No. 27, Mongkok Market, before Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Police Court this morning.

It was alleged in the summons that complainant was assaulted by the detective at No. 151 Temple Street, second floor, on January 22.

In permitting the withdrawal of the summons, his Worship stated that the facts of the case had been explained by complainant's solicitor and, under these circumstances, he gave permission to complainant to withdraw.

OBSTRUCTION OVERCOME

SPINDLE REDUCTION MEASURE

An obstructionist motion in connection with the Spindle Reduction Bill, to refer it to Select Committee, was defeated by a vote of 204 to 131. The Bill now goes to the Standing Committee which gives it a good chance of passing.—Reuter.

SOLDIER SENT TO PRISON

book by signing the name of J. White on January 25;

Giving false information in the Kingsville Private Hotel guest book by signing the name of F. J. Deane on January 27;

Giving false information by signing the Republic Bay Hotel guest book in the name of F. J. Deane on January 28.

Detective Inspector M. Murphy appeared for the prosecution.

OFFICER'S TESTIMONY

An officer of the Regiment stated that he had known the defendant for a year and his Army record was good. He was a Lance Corporal before these crimes were committed. He absented himself for a week and was deprived of his stripes by the Commanding Officer. On the same day, Mansfield was again absent and was found two or three days later by the military police. The officer thought that there might be extenuating circumstances of some sort which caused the defendant to commit these crimes. Defendant had four years' service.

Defendant stated that he had been in the Colony for two years and was for one year in Shanghai.

ONE MONTH

The magistrate passed sentence of one month's hard labour on the first charge and ordered $53.50 amends to be paid in instalments at the expiration of sentence. The accused is also to pay $10 amends to the Metropolitan Police on similar terms, while on the remaining three charges convictions were registered against the defendant.

Detective Sub-Inspector Noloth informed the magistrate that the type of offence of signing false names at hotels was becoming prevalent and it was very hard for the police to trace these people. It was an easy thing to do, but it should not be done, he added.

Wealth Of Information In H.K.R.A. Bulletin

The January issue of the Hongkong Rifle Association Bulletin again contains a wealth of information about rifle shooting in the Colony. The Association's activities during the month are reviewed, and full details are given in this issue of the Association Prize Meeting of 1935 which will be held on the Army Ranges at Kowloon City, commencing on April 30.

An interesting feature is the illustrated supplement, which shows the Hongkong team for the N.R.A. Overseas Match and the various teams which participated in the Team Competition held on November 20 last year.

Further hints on the Aperture Sight are given to beginners by "C.A.G." whose last article on the same subject was much appreciated. The Bulletin should prove of great interest to every member of the Hongkong Rifle Association.

CANDIDATE FOR U.S. PRESIDENCY

Washington, Feb. 4. Senator William Borah, the Western political "strong man" of the Republican Party, has announced that he will definitely stand in the forthcoming presidential election.

Senator Borah, whose home state is Idaho and whose political headquarters is ordinarily at Boise, is one of the most influential men in the Republican Party and carries a tremendous following throughout the West and Middle West. It is even expected that his candidature may compel strong following from the ordinarily solid Democrats of the southern states.

He has this advantage over any Democrat candidate, that there is no other outstanding Republican likely to enter the field, and there is therefore little likelihood of the party vote being split.—Reuter.

URBAN COUNCIL

FORMAL BUSINESS ONLY YESTERDAY

Formal business only was transacted at the meeting of the Urban Council yesterday afternoon.

A letter was laid on the table from Government relative to the appointment of Dr. Li Shu-fan and Mr. A. el Arculli as additional members of the Council.

In addition to these two there were present Mr. W. J. Carrie, Chairman; Hon. Dr. A. R. Wellington, Vice-Chairman; Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith, Hon. Mr. T. H. King, Mr. F. C. Hall, Dr. R. A. de Castro Baste, Mr. L. C. F. Bellamy, Dr. Chau Sek-nin, and Mr. G. J. Roe, Secretary.

Applications for eating house licences at Nos. 57 to 59, Nathan Road, ground floor, and No. 80, Wing Lok Street, ground floor, were refused; and it was decided to visit No. 14, Eastern Street, third floor, on Thursday at noon before coming to a decision on an application for a goods factory licence there.

Monthly returns of a routine nature were submitted to the meeting.

BACK IN CHINA

Peking, Feb. 6. Chinese sources declare that Ma Chung-yin, leader of the Sinciang revolt of two years ago, who escaped to Russia after the collapse of his enterprise, has arrived in Peking, accompanied by Wang Tien-yu, his chief-of-staff, and secretary.—Reuter.

So Ping-san, 32, unemployed, and three other men were again remanded by Mr. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when they appeared on remand before him on a charge of assaulting a motor car painter named Wong Yau-chung. Detective-Inspector A. H. Elston stated that complainant, who had been suffering from a ruptured spleen, was still in hospital but is not in danger. A further remand was asked for and the police had no objection to bail. Defendants were remanded for one week and bail is the sum of $100 each was granted.

The Entertainments Committee of the Sailors and Soldiers' Home have been very fortunate, through the good offices of Capt. Holland, Marine Superintendent of the C. P. S. Co., to obtain the services of the famous dance band of the Empress of Canada for the popular monthly dance in the Assembly Hall of the Home to-day at 8.30 p.m. Service Friends $1; ladies by invitation only.
